DECISION AND ORDER

On January 16, 1977, administrative law officer David Nevins (hereafter ALO) issued his decision in this case. The respondent and the general counsel filed timely exceptions.

Having reviewed the ALO's decision, the briefs, exceptions, and the entire record, we adopt the ALO's findings, conclusions and recommendations to the extent consistent with this opinion.^{1/}

There are incidents which did not involve acknowledged union agents or which did not occur in the immediate vicinity of the picket lines for which the ALO found the respondent accountable and which were found to constitute violations of Section 1154(a)(1) of the Act. We accept his conclusion as to these incidents, but wish to clarify the basis for our action. The distinguishing feature of this case is that not less than fourteen acknowledged union agents, including the respondent's strike-leader, personally engaged in numerous violations of employee rights during the strike. This conduct ran the gamut from threats of violence to workers, to actual violence, including rock and clod throwing, forcing workers' cars off the road, assaulting workers, smashing truck and auto windows and causing at least one fire. In the context of this activity, we agree that the respondent may be held liable because its agents, having once established a pattern of conduct clearly violative of the Act, have made it liable for subsequent striker misconduct in conformity with that pattern, and because of the failure of its agents to act effectively to curb striker misconduct within their knowledge. See, e.g., International Association of Machinists, 183 NLRB 1225, 1230-31, 80 LRRM 2158 (1970); Teamsters Local 115, 157 NLRB 1637, 1642-3, 61 LRRM 1568 (1966); International Union of Electrical Workers, 134 NLRB 1713, 1724, 49 LRRM 1407 (1961).

We also accept the ALO's determination that conduct such as taking down the auto license numbers of non-striking workers, seeking to procure the names and addresses of non-striking workers, following them from work or otherwise creating the impression that these workers were the subjects of surveillance was violative of the Act. We do so only because of the overwhelming evidence that respondent's agents and others following their lead were engaged in a course of conduct which clearly indicated to all observers their intent to coerce by force and violence worker recognition of the picket line. However, without such clear evidence of coercive intent these activities would not constitute unfair labor practices since unions have the right to exert pressure upon non-members to honor picket lines and to discipline strikebreaking members. Nothing we hold in this case, therefore, should be read as a condemnation of, or a limitation upon, legitimate union attempts to achieve these goals.

We decline to accept the ALO's recommendation that the respondent be held liable for the truck fire which occurred on September 1. His analysis, premised upon the view that a group of nearby pickets "adopted" the fire by failing to put it out and by cheering in its presence, does not properly account for the realities of the forces and tensions on picket lines and is an unwarranted extension of the case law in this area.

In a similar vein, we do not adopt the ALO's extension of the Booster Lodge Case enunciated in footnote 26 of his decision.^{3/}

The Remedy;

The ALO recommended that the respondent be ordered to

We have considered the respondent's several exceptions concerning evidentiary issues at trial and find them without merit. In the first of these the respondent challenges the ALO's denial of its motion under § 356 of the Evidence Code and § 20274 of the Regulations [8 Cal. Admin. Code § 20274 (1976)] that it be permitted to view all videotapes made at the strike scene. We believe that videotapes are encompassed by the Code provision, but it has no application to this situation. Here, the general counsel offered portions of the totality of the videotape made pay the litigation costs and fees of both the general counsel and the charging party. The respondent has excepted. We decline to apply this remedy to the instant case. ^{4/}

Our treatment of this remedial request is best begun with an awareness of the general history of this sort of relief in this country. As distinguished from the English practice, the "American Rule" is that attorneys' fees are not ordinarily recoverable by the victorious litigant in the absence of a statute or an enforceable contract which makes provision for such an award. See Fleischmann Distilling Corp. v. Maier Brewing Co., 386 U.S. 714 (1967). This general proposition is the law in California, embodied in Code of Civil Procedure, Section 1021. However, several non-statutory exceptions to the rule have been recognized in this state. The first of these is the so-called "common fund" principle: where a number of persons are entitled in common to a specific fund and an action brought by a plaintiff preserves or creates the fund for the benefit of all, the plaintiff may be awarded attorneys' fees out of the fund to prevent the unjust at the strike scene. The operator of the videocamera testified that the tape shown constituted the entirety of the tape made in connection with the incidents therein depicted. For this reason the respondent's exception is invalid, for as regards the specific incidents at issue, there is no "remainder" or "other portion" of the tape to which it may have access. The second exception points to alleged repeated instances of leading questions posed by the general counsel. Our review of the specific instances cited by respondent and the whole record discloses that on many occasions the respondent made no objection to the question, on others its counsel indicated his awareness of language difficulties with the witnesses, and in at least one instance the response elicited by the question was not relied upon by the ALO. No error was committed.

We deny the respondent's motion for oral argument. The briefs and the exceptions adequately present the issue for decision.

enrichment of the group. See D'Amico v. Board of Medical Examiners , 11 Cal. 3d 1, 26-27, 112 Cal. Rptr. 786, 803 (1974). The second exception is the "substantial benefit rule": where a class action or a stockholder derivative suit confers a substantial benefit upon the defendant, the defendant may be required to yield an attorneys' fee to the plaintiff. Id. at 25, 112 Cal. Rptr. at 804. Finally, it may be argued that California courts may exercise the traditional power of a court of equity and award an appropriate attorneys' fee to a prevailing party where the opponent's defenses may be characterized as in bad faith, vexatious, or interposed for oppressive reasons. Id. at 27, 112 Cal. Rptr. at 804-05. However, there is a split of authority on the point. Compare Santandrea v. Siltec Corp., 56 Cal. App. 3rd 525 (1976) (affirming such an award) with Young v. Redman, 55 Cal. App. 3rd 834 (1976) (reversing such an award).

It is clear that none of these non-statutory exceptions apply to this case. There is no "common fund" here. Moreover, the "substantial benefit" rule cannot apply because any benefit produced by this litigation descends upon the charging party and those similarly situated, not on the respondent. Finally, whatever may be the inherent power of a court of equity to sanction harassing or vexatious litigation behavior, absent some statutory grant of power, we cannot view that power as also residing in an administrative agency, even where, as here, it performs quasi-judicial functions. ^{5/}

^{5/} The so-called "private attorney general" theory, left open by the D'Amico court pending the outcome of federal litigation on the

There remains for consideration whether the ALRA provides a statutory base for the award of such fees within the express exception of C.C.P., Section 1021. We believe that it does. A comparison of the pertinent portions of Section 1160.3 of the ALRA and Section 10(c) of the NLRA discloses that our statute is at least as expansive in its grant of remedial power to this agency as the NLRA is to the NLRB. The NLRB, with judicial approval, has construed its power under Section 10(c) to authorize the award of attorneys' fees and litigation costs in appropriate cases.^{6/} When the Legislature enacted the ALRA, therefore, it granted to this Board a power to award attorneys' fees at least to the extent that the NLRB has that power.

The question of this Board's power aside, the rationale for the utilization of such an award must be considered. We view the interests of the NLRB and this Board in this connection as identical. Both the NLRB and this Board are mandated to remedy the effects of unfair labor practices, but both are enjoined from engaging in purely punitive impositions unrelated to remedying specific conduct and its effects. Under either the NLRA or the ALRA the ultimate consideration is whether the award in a issue, now appears of doubtful validity in California following the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Alyeska Pipeline Service Company v. The Wilderness Society, et al., 421 U.S. 240 (1975). See D'Amico, supra, 11 C. 3d at 27, 112 Cal. Rptr. at 805; Northington v. Davis, 64 Cal. App. 3d 643, 134 Cal. Rptr. 610 (1976).

^{6/} See Heck's Inc., 215 NLRB 142, 88 LRRM 1049 (1974); Tiidee Products, Inc., and I.U.E., 194 NLRB 1234, 79 LRRM 1175 (1972).

particular case effectuates the policies of the statute. Under either statutory scheme the implementation of the legislation is dependent in the first instance upon the agency's ability to utilize effectively its resources, unfettered by trial calendars crowded with meritless litigation. In specific cases there arises the need for the agency to fashion remedial orders which conform to the realities of the harm created by the totality of the respondent's conduct, including the effect of its litigation posture and conduct on the other parties. For "[e]ffective redress for a statutory wrong should both compensate the party wronged and withhold from the wrongdoer the 'fruits of the violation'". Montgomery Ward & Co. v. NLRB, 330 F.2d 889, 894, 58 LRRM 2115 (6th Cir. 1965). Against these factors must be balanced the right of a respondent to offer all legitimate defenses and arguments.

Our evaluation of these factors indicates the desirability of our adoption of the NLRB's approach to this question. The NLRB holds the appropriateness of this remedy to be dependent upon a characterization of the respondent's litigation posture as either "frivolous" or "debatable". Where the former is found, the award may be made; in the latter situation, it is not warranted. Neither "frivolous" nor "debatable" are self-explanatory. Their recitation does not account for the important distinctions which may derive from the uniquely public nature of the unfair labor practice process: the general counsel is not a private litigant, but a public officer vindicating important public policy pursuant to statutory directive. However, the terms do provide a framework for analysis, and as we are progressively enlightened in our case-by-case approach to this question, they will acquire a more definite content. We therefore propose to adopt these categories in this and future cases presenting the question of such awards.

The application of this standard to the case at hand does not disclose support for the ALO's recommendation. Here, the respondent was faced with a complaint containing a multitude of charges of violations of § 1154(a)(1) of the Act growing out of strike activity at and around the charging party's premises. It is the first case of its type to come to this Board's attention. Indeed, at the time of the litigation of the complaint, the Board as presently constituted had yet to issue a decision in an unfair labor practice case. The substance of the conduct charged and litigated at trial consisted of claims of property destruction, arson, assaults and batteries, and other similarly serious conduct. The remedies requested in the complaint were novel and perhaps "extraordinary", certainly as judged by NLRB precedent: decertification, assessment of costs and fees, and compensation of employees for emotional distress and property damage suffered as the result of the respondent's conduct. The outcome of the case was, in significant part, dependent upon the resolution of difficult questions of agency and liability.

In view of the above facts, we cannot conclude that the respondent's litigation posture may be characterized as "frivolous" The application of the remedy recommended here must be carefully weighed. Its injudicious use threatens substantial harm to the legitimate right of charged parties to force the general counsel to its proof. In the instant case, for example, the ALO did not find the respondent to be liable for several incidents of substantial property damage: the destruction of a large irrigation pump and the cutting of 11-12 acres of vineyard. Nor did he find the decertification remedy to be appropriate. ^{7/}We therefore modify the ALO's remedial recommendation to eliminate the imposition of litigation costs and fees upon the respondent.

We likewise modify the proposed Order in the following respects:

1. Delete from paragraph 1(b) the language "...giving employees the impression that they are under surveillance..." and "...threatening non-members with fines for engaging in protected activity or fining such non-members, . . . " .
2. Rewrite paragraph 2(d) .
3. Strike paragraph 2(f) and renumber accordingly.
4. Substitute the attached Notice to Workers for the Notice recommended by the ALO. We do so to conform the Notice to those utilized in the decisions issued subsequent to the hearing in this case.

Accordingly, pursuant to Labor Code § 1160.3, the Board hereby orders that the respondent Western Conference of Teamsters, Agricultural Division, and its Local 946, and their officers,

We, of course, do not imply that a completely unsuccessful defense is by its nature the equivalent of a "frivolous" defense. Our case-by-case approach to this issue precludes such a holding.

agents, successors, and assigns shall:

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) In any manner restraining or coercing employees of Vincent B. Zaninovich, Inc., (hereinafter VBZ)/ in their exercise of their right to self-organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, or to refrain from any and all such activities, except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement of the type authorized by § 1153(c) of the Act.

(b) Engaging in conduct in regard to VBZ employees of the following type: threatening violence or committing such violence, threatening property damage or committing such damage, threatening employees with blacklisting or actually blacklisting such employees, or committing any of the foregoing acts in regard to other persons either in the presence of VBZ employees or where it is reasonably certain that such employees will learn of such conduct.

2. Take the following affirmative action:

(a) Post the attached Notice to Workers on bulletin boards in its offices throughout the state where other notices and information are available for its members. Such posting to continue for a period of six consecutive months during the twelve month period following issuance of this decision or its enforcement if necessary. The respondent shall exercise due care to replace any notice which has been altered, defaced, or removed.

(b) Mail the attached Notice to Workers, translated into any languages deemed appropriate by the regional director in addition to Spanish and Tagalog, to all employees of VBZ during the period August 1, 1976 to September 30, 1976 inclusive. Such notices to be mailed to the last known address of such workers.

(c) Provide sufficient copies of the attached Notice to Workers in appropriate languages to VBZ so that, if it consents, a copy may be distributed to its employees hired during the next peak season.

(d) Designate a representative or representatives to read, or be present while a Board agent reads, the attached Notice to Workers in appropriate languages to the assembled employees of VBZ, during the next peak season if the employer consents to such a reading on its property. The respondent to compensate the employer for labor costs incurred by it, if any, by the provision of such an opportunity to address the workers.

(e) Preserve and make available to the Board or its agent, upon request, for examination and copying all membership records or other records necessary to determine whether the respondent has complied with this Decision and Order to the fullest extent possible.

(f) Notify the regional director of the Fresno Regional Office within 20 days from receipt of a copy of this Decision and Order of steps the respondent has taken to comply therewith, and to continue reporting periodically thereafter until full compliance is achieved.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that allegations contained in the second amended complaint not specifically found or adopted herein as violations of the Act shall be, and hereby are dismissed.

NOTICE TO WORKERS OF
V. B. ZANINOVICH & SONS, INC.

After a trial where each side had a chance to present their facts, the Agricultural Labor Relations Board has found that we interfered with the rights of the workers at the company to decide for themselves whether or not to join the strike which we called at the company last August and September. The Board has told us to send out and post this Notice.

We will do what the Board has ordered, and also tell you that:

The Agricultural Labor Relations Act is a law that gives all farm workers these rights:

- (1) to organize themselves;
- (2) to form, join, or help unions;
- (3) to bargain as a group and choose whom they want to speak for them;
- (4) to act together with other workers to try to get a contract or to help or protect one another;
- (5) to decide not to do any of these things.

Because this is true we promise that:

WE WILL NOT force you to join any strike we may call by threatening you or damaging your property or doing anything like that. You have the right not to participate in a strike we may call. But if you are a member of our union and work during a strike we may discipline you, as long as it is done according to the law.

THIS IS AN OFFICIAL NOTICE OF THE AGRICULTURAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, AN AGENCY OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA. DO NOT REMOVE OR MUTILATE!

Member HUTCHINSON dissenting in part:

For the reasons expressed in my separate concurring/dissenting opinions in Sam Andrews & Sons, 3 ALRB No. 45, Western Tomato Growers & Shippers (Ernest Perry), 3 ALRB No. 51, and S. L. Douglass, 3 ALRB No. 59, I would adopt the ALO's reasoning and reconunendation concerning the award of litigation costs to the general counsel and charging party.

While the majority adopts the NLRB approach on this issue, they decline to provide the remedy here because the respondent did have legitimate reasons to litigate and successfully defended against several charges and far reaching claims. The majority also places some emphasis on the fact that the presently constituted Board had yet to issue an unfair labor practice decision at the time of the acts committed by respondent.

The majority ignores the fact that respondent's litigation posture was, in large part, infused with vexatious and utterly frivolous tactics. They further overlook the fact that respondent's original misconduct went far beyond mere technical violations of the new law. At that time it required no crystal ball to conclude that endangering human lives, wanton destruction of property, and violent intimidation of workers was a violation of the Act. Most of the conduct charged and proven constituted moral as well as legal wrongdoing.

I do not think the fact that part of the respondent's litigation posture was legitimate should shield it from responsibility for its vexatious and abusive conduct. I would remand the case to the ALO for assessment of litigation costs to the general counsel and the charging party to the extent that those costs were incurred in response to respondent's tactics or the proven flagrant violations of the law.

DECISION

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

DAVID C. NEVINS, Administrative Law Officer: This case was heard by me on November 4, 5, 8, 9, 30, and December 1, 8, 9, and 10, 1976.^{1/} The original complaint in this matter was issued on August 26, and was amended on September 2 and October 15. The complaint, as amended, is based on a charge filed by V. B. Zaninovich & Sons, Inc. (hereafter "VBZ" or the ^{1/}Unless otherwise specified, all dates herein refer to 1976.

1 "Employer"); the charge was duly served on the Respondent, 2 Western Conference of Teamsters, Agricultural Division, I.B.T.
3 and its Affiliated Locals 1973 and 9#6, on August 26, as ad-4 mitted by the Respondent. ^{2/} The complaint alleges that the Res-5 pondent violated the Agricultural Labor Relations Act (hereafter 6 the "Act").

7 All parties were represented and given a full opportunity to 8 participate in the proceedings. The General Counsel and the Charging 9 Party filed briefs after the close of the hearing, and counsel for the 10 Respondent as well as the General Counsel made closing oral statements.

11 Upon the entire record, including my observation of the 12 demeanor of the witnesses, and after consideration of the arguments and 13 briefs submitted by the parties, I make the following;

14 FINDINGS OF FACT

15 I. Jurisdiction.

16 The Respondent was alleged and admitted to be a labor 17 organization within the meaning of Section 1140.4(f) of the Act, and I so 18 find. Similarly, VBZ was alleged and admitted to be an agricultural 19 employer within the meaning of Section 1140.4(c) of the Act, engaged in 20 agriculture in Tulare County, California, and I so find.

21 II The Alleged Unfair Labor Practices.

22 The General Counsel's amended complaint charges the Respondent 23 with numerous violations of Section 1154(a)(1) of the Act, allegedly 24 occurring as a result of a strike at the Employer's premises, during 25 August and September. The allegations assert that Respondent, through its 26 agents, threatened employees who continued to work during the strike with 27 blacklisting and excessive fines, with the loss of work and violence, 28 and with physical harm; that Respondent attempted to identify those who continued to work for the purpose of reprisal; that Respondent physically interfered with and threw objects at employees and their property; that Respondent physically destroyed the Employer's property; that Respondent physically harmed employees; and that Respondent engaged in similar conduct toward the Employer, its agents and representatives, as well as agents for the ^{2/}The only local affiliate of the Respondent actually involved in this proceeding is Local 9#6. It appears that at some time prior to the hearing, Local 1973 was either merged into or its name changed to Local 946.

1 Agricultural Labor Relations Board.

2 In the original complaint Pete Maturino was identified as 3 an agent of and acting in behalf of the Respondent. A similar 4 allegation was made in respect to Efren Gonzales in the first amended 5 complaint. The second amended complaint added to that allegation the 6 names of Daniel Olegario, Jose Sandoval, Imelda Lopez, Consuelo Delgado 7 Gonzales, Art Castro, and Anthony Louie De Carlos.

8 The Respondent, through its answer and amended answer, 9 generally denied it committed any violations of the Act. Respondent, 10 however, admitted in its answer that those persons named in the preceding 11 paragraph were its agents and acting in its behalf, with the one 12 exception of Jose Sandoval.^{3/}

13 I I I . The Facts.

14 A. Background;

15 VBZ grows table grapes in Tulare County. It was a party to a 16 collective bargaining agreement with the Respondent, dated August 9, 17 1973, which agreement was to be effective until April 14, 1977. A 18 representation election was conducted at VBZ in September, 1975, and the 19 Respondent was certified as the collective bargaining representative on 20 December 16, 1975. V. B. Zaninovich & Sons, 1 ALRB No. 22 (1975). An 21 interim agreement was thereafter entered into between Respondent and 22 VBZ which provided that the parties enter into immediate negotiations 23 for a new agreement and that the Respondent "shall have the right to 24 cancel this agreement on 48 hours' written notice and take economic 25 action to enforce its contractual proposals."

26 The Employer and Respondent entered into negotiations in 27 March, 1976. Those negotiations were suspended in April, but resumed in 28 August. In a letter dated August 16, Respondent's

3/At the unfair labor practice hearing the Respondent attempted to amend its answer, desiring to delete its existing admission that its seven-admitted agents had acted in its behalf, The General Counsel opposed the motion as untimely and prejudicial. The Respondent's motion was denied, although a later opportunity was provided for Respondent to renew its motion. At no time, however, has Respondent come forth with an adequate reason for amending its answer in regard to those agents named and admitted to be acting in Respondent's behalf, admissions made by the Respondent's counsel with full knowledge of this proceeding and the violations charged. Nor was any reason given as to why such a significant admission should be amended at the late date sought by Respondent.

1 secretary-treasurer, Pete Baclig, an admitted agent, wrote the Employer, 2 saying "this letter will serve as notice of our intention to cancel the 3 Interim Agreement effective this date, August 16, 1976." Two days 4 later, VBZ's employees left their jobs for the day, returning the following 5 day.

6 The Respondent's strike against the Employer began in earnest 7 on August 24.^{4/} It involved no small effort. Some 400 employees were 8 working for VBZ when the strike began, a number which dwindled to between 9 30 and 100 during the strike.^{5/} One strike participant, Mr. Maturino, 10 estimated the number of pickets at about 150. Other of Respondent's business 11 agents indicated that from 20 to 70 pickets could be found at particular 12 entrances to the VBZ property, though other entrances would have only 10 or 13 15 picketing.

14 Included with those picketing were the many business agents of 15 Respondent called to Delano. Some 15 to 20 business agents came from such 16 places as Salinas, Calexico, Coachella, and LaMont, in addition to the 17 seven business agents assigned to the Respondent's Delano office.

18 Respondent's business agents and pickets were not the only ones 19 at the locus of the strike. VBZ employed an unspecified number of security 20 guards through a company by the name of Triple A. Additionally, a large 21 contingent of deputy sheriffs from the Tulare County Sheriff's Office 22 patrolled the strike scene, numbering between 10 to 12 on some days and 20 23 to 30 on other days. Between August 19 and September 7, Tulare County 24 logged some 1,500 manhours in deputy sheriff work at the Employer's 25 vineyard. Some of this work involved escorting caravans of workers, 26 traveling in their own vehicles, from the VBZ property after work each 27 day.

28 ^{4/}The Respondent and the Employer are at odds over whether the strike was properly initiated, the Employer claiming that employees were improperly polled regarding the strike and that the interim agreement was improperly cancelled. This latter claim, notes the Employer, is the subject of another, separate unfair labor practice charge. Nonetheless, no issue is directly raised by the formal pleadings In this proceeding as to whether the Respondent's strike was properly initiated and, therefore, no such issue is considered herein.

^{5/}The record does not clearly reflect who comprised the Employer's labor force during the strike. But, it is fair to say that many who worked had been employees before the strike.
Others were new employees hired during the strike, and others were employed by outside companies which purchased some of VBZ's crops during the strike and harvested them at VBZ's premises.

1 To some extent physical evidence introduced by the General 2 Counsel portrays what it must have been like on the property lines of 3 VBZ during the strike. Thus, photographs were introduced depicting 4 groups milling about. Video tapes were introduced revealing large 5 numbers of people, picketers and police, gathered at certain entrances; 6 noise can be heard from the yelling, sirens, and loudspeakers which 7 occasionally blared forth from the picketing sites.

8 Only two days had elapsed from August 24 when the Employer 9 filed its unfair labor practice charge, a charge resulting in an 10 immediate complaint by the General Counsel. On August 27, the General 11 Counsel then filed a complaint in the Superior Court of the County of 12 Tulare, seeking injunctive relief and a temporary restraining order in 13 respect to certain strike conduct. The temporary restraining order was 14 immediately granted.

15 That same day, August 27, the formal papers and res-16 training order in the county court action were served on Respon-17 dent by Fred Lopez, an agent and investigator for the Board.
18 Mr. Lopez first served the papers on Louis Uribe, an admitted 19 business agent of the Respondent, who was at the Respondent's 20 Delano office. Lopez also served the papers that evening on a 21 Mr. Cotner, who Lopez "believed was affiliated with the Western 22 Conference of Teamsters and who was with Pete Baclig at the 23 time."^{6/}

24 The Court's temporary restraining order, signed by Judge 25 Bradley, enjoined the Respondent and its agents from threatening 26 employees with excessive fines and blacklisting, identifying or 27 threatening to identify non-striking employees, threatening employees 28 with bodily harm or damage to their property, inflicting such harm or 29 damage, and threatening employers with such harm or damage, or 30 inflicting the same.

31 Barely a week later, on September 3, the General Counsel 32 filed papers with the Tulare Court, seeking to have the 33 ^{6/}The service of Cotner took place at Delano's prominent motel 34 and bowling alley, the Stardust, where the Respondent and VBZ were to 35 meet in negotiations that night. As detailed infra, Lopez had driven 36 to the location in a state vehicle, marked as such, all four tires of 37 which were "slashed" as it stood in the parking lot. That evening, 38 and again on September 3, VBZ's collective bargaining representative 39 refused to participate in bargaining, asserting Respondent's strike 40 misconduct as the reason for breaking off negotiations.

1 Respondent adjudged in contempt for violating the outstanding temporary 2 restraining order. The Contempt Petition cited the restraining order 3 and alleged numerous violations of that order, supplying some 12 4 affidavits and numerous police reports that cited conduct identical to 5 or similar to that which is in issue in this proceeding. The formal 6 papers in that contempt action were served the same day on two of 7 Respondent's business agents, Max Martinez and Pete Maturino. Insofar 8 as the record indicates, no violence or threats thereof, or other 9 misconduct, took place
10 after September 3.

11 B. The Incidents In Question;

12 1. Introduction

13 The incidents described by the testimony can be organized and 14 discussed within several different formats. I have selected one which 15 conforms most closely with the fact-finder's 11 greatest difficulty in 16 this case--namely, to determine which of those acts described in the 17 testimony can be linked to the Respondent and, hence, found to be the 18 Respondent's responsibility.

19 Much of the evidence introduced against the Respondent 20 was introduced over the Respondent's objections. Primarily, the 21 Respondent opposed such evidence by claiming that the identity of the 22 wrongdoer or perpetrator in many cases was unknown and, accordingly, such 23 evidence should be excluded as irrelevant to the Respondent's culpability.
24 Now, rather than at the hearing, I believe is the appropriate time to 25 determine whether a sufficient nexus exists between any given act of 26 misconduct described in the evidence and the Respondent's actions and 27 responsibility. Thus, the following discussion is oriented toward 28 determining whether, and to what extent, the Respondent must be held responsible for misconduct surrounding the strike.¹⁷

¹⁷Of course, those of Respondent's business agents who testified (nine of them) essentially denied any wrongdoing on their part. Based on their demeanor and on the quality of their testimony, their denials are not credited by me. Their testi mony, as cited occasionally in subsequent sections, is largely discredible from the standpoint of both logic and its conflict with the contrary and more credible testimony opposing theirs. One brief example might now suffice: despite notice of the unfair labor practice charge, despite notice of the temporary restraining order and contempt action, and despite the presence of numerous deputy sheriffs on VBZ property, the Respondent's strike leader, Pete Maturino, who controlled all other business agents during the strike and who was daily on the picket lines, blandly claimed that he was totally unaware of -- (continued)

1 2. Incidents Involving the Respondent's Admitted Agents

2 A number of incidents cited in the testimony are identified 3 directly with Respondent's admitted business agents. The following is 4 a brief discussion of such incidents, not necessarily in the 5 chronological order in which they occurred. With but few exceptions, the 6 incidents cited in the testimony were not tied to specific dates, but 7 rather were incidents generally placed between August 24 and September 3.

8 Louis Uribe--Louis Uribe, the Respondent's senior 9 business agent in LaMont, took part in Respondent's strike at VBZ.
10 He was identified as involved in several incidents.

11 On or about September 1, Mr. Uribe was heard to proclaim 12 over one of the loudspeakers or megaphones used by business agents, 13 directing his remarks to Jack Pandol, an area grower, the following: 14 Pandol we know where you live, we know where you go, we know your 15 children and your family, we know where you are; remember his face, 16 sometimes he walks downtown by himself. Uribe made his statements 17 while workers were within some 75 to 100 feet, easily within hearing 18 distance from the broadcast announcement. Uribe's statement was described 19 by Mr. Lopez, the Board agent who witnessed the incident, and is docu-20 mented on the video tape taken by the Tulare County Sheriff's Office.^{8/} 21 Uribe's comments were made after he had addressed the field workers, 22 telling them that they could be disciplined under the Respondent's 23 constitution and by-laws for working behind a sanctioned picket line.

24 On another occasion, Uribe was addressing workers from one of 25 the grape avenues, while they were working in the field. According to 26 the credible testimony of Benjamin Cepriano, a foreman for VBZ, Uribe 27 asked the workers to join in the strike and, when he got no response, 28 he became angry and shouted, "fuck you, you have to get out of the fields; if you don't come out

29 ^{7/}(continued)--any violence or misconduct occurring during the 30 strike, learning of such activity only through newspaper accounts. Not 31 only was his testimony in conflict with common sense, but it conflicted 32 with both the credible and physical evidence which placed him at the 33 very scene where misconduct was occurring. The testimony of the other 34 business agents suffered from a similar lack of reality.

35 ^{8/}This is one of those incidents which Mr. Maturino denied 36 having known about. Yet, the deputy sheriff who made the video tape, as 37 well as the tape itself, placed Maturino at the scene.

1 we'll see what happens."^{9/}

2 A final incident involving Uribe was described by 3 Mrs. Soledad Barajas Lopez. She and her husband, both workers, 4 were driving home from VBZ property with their three daughters and 5 two nephews, after having gone to VBZ looking for work, when they were 6 followed by a brown and white-striped van. The van began following them 7 at the VBZ property and despite Mr. Lopez's driving followed the Lopez 8 vehicle at speeds up to approaching 90 miles per hour. Mrs. Lopez 9 identified Uribe as a passenger in the van, an identification credibly 10 made immediately upon seeing a photograph of him. Mrs. Lopez also 11 recalled that when the van came close to their vehicle, she saw Uribe 12 raise a rifle in the van window. ^{10/}

13 Louis Uribe did not testify at the hearing.

14 Efren Gonzales--Mr. Gonzales was a business agent 15 assigned to Respondent's Oelano office. He was also implicated in a 16 number of incidents. One day during the strike, when some 17 35 to 50 workers' cars were parked by a field in which the em-18 ployees were working, Gonzales was observed methodically going to the 19 front of each car, bending down by the license plates, 20 and writing something down on a clipboard he was carrying. As he was 21 doing so the workers could observe him; they were in the 22 immediate area loading grapes on a truck. Gonzales was observed going 23 from car to car by Marty Zaninovich, a supervisor with and 24 one of the owners of VBZ. His testimony was credible, as opposed 25 to Gonzales's cursory denial of the incident.

26 ^{9/} Although from time-to-time statements herein are 27 placed in quotation marks, such statements may not be a verbatim 28 account of the testimony cited. Inasmuch as this Decision is written without having viewed the stenographic transcript, the quotes may not be exact. Nonetheless, quotes are used at times to denote the conversation in issue; at other times, the conversation will be paraphrased.

29 ^{10/} Little doubt exists that Mrs. Lopez believed that she saw 30 Uribe raise a rifle. Nonetheless, it is difficult to accept at face 31 value her belief, for despite her conclusion that, she saw a rifle she 32 was unable to describe what physical characteristics of the raised object 33 led her to believe it was a rifle. This inability on her part is 34 significant because of the limited view she had of the raised object.
35 Accordingly, I do not conclude that the object raised by Uribe was--in 36 fact--a rifle.

1 Another incident involving Gonzales was described by 2 Marlo Gutierrez, a security guard from Triple A. Gutierrez was 3 standing in a roadway perpendicular to the one Gonzales was driving 4 on; Gutierrez was removing a "Tijuana Tack" (a device more fully 5 discussed later), when Gonzales drove his vehicle swerving it off the 6 center of the road toward Gutierrez, stopping it just inches from 7 Gutierrez's knee. Gonzales then accused Gutierrez of having thrown a 8 Tijuana Tack at his car, which Gutierrez denied having done. ^{11/} 9 There were no employees present in the general area where the incident 10 in question occurred.

11 Anthony DeCarlos--Mr. DeCarlos, another admitted agent of 12 the Respondent, was observed by Deputy Sheriff Horn as involved in an 13 incident. On September 2, according to the credible testimony of 14 Horn, a grape truck came slowly out of the VBZ vineyard with two 15 people in its cab, traveling at about five miles per hour, turned on 16 Avenue 24, and was converged upon by some 40 picketers in the area.
17 The truck carried grape boxes. Horn observed DeCarlos standing in the 18 middle of Avenue 24 about six feet from where the truck turned, from 19 which point DeCarlos went to and jumped on the truck's running-20 board, reached in the window, and slapped the driver. Horn then 21 arrested DeCarlos. ^{12/}

22 ^{11/}Gonzales denied swerving his vehicle towards Gutierrez.
23 However, when reporting the incident to a deputy sheriff, Daryll 24 Yandell, Gonzales told the deputy that he had swerved toward Gutierrez 25 to avoid hitting the Tijuana Tack. Soon after the incident, and 26 before any other vehicles had passed over the same spot, Yandell (who 27 was in position to observe the area of the incident) investigated 28 and found swerve marks toward where Gutierrez had been, marks which could be discerned from the dirt roadway. Gonzales also denied in his testimony being with anyone at the time, but Yandell was told that not only did Gonzales have a passenger but that Anthony DeCarlos, another business agent, also claimed to be present when the incident occurred, following Gonzales's vehicle.

29 ^{12/}DeCarlos did not testify. But, Business Agent Mohamed 30 Abdullah (known as "Tully") testified that DeCarlos jumped on the 31 truck only after the truck had nearly hit DeCarlos. Abdullah 32 claimed that at no time was the truck moving slower than 25 miles per 33 hour. Abdullah's testimony cannot be accepted, not only because it 34 is impossible to believe that the truck was able to turn out of the 35 vineyard at a minimum of 25 miles per hour, but the video depiction 36 of the scene clearly indicates the contrary. Moreover, it is simply 37 incredible that DeCarlos could mount a truck moving at 25 miles per 38 hour and then jump off when it was going 40 to 45 miles per hour, which Abdullah stated.

1 Ernest Tafalla--Mr. Tafalla was a business agent assigned to 2 Respondent's Delano office; he helped service the past collective 3 bargaining agreement with VBZ. One day after work, Mr. Tafalla was 4 observed by Marty Zaninovich riding as a passenger in a pickup truck which 5 overtook and drove past a car caravan of workers about six miles from the 6 VBZ property. Other vehicles were also passing the caravan. But, in the 7 case of Tafalla he was observed by Zaninovich throwing rocks out his-8 window, throwing them at the workers' cars. One of the rocks 9 hit a worker's vehicle.

10 Zaninovich was able to identify Tafalla only briefly.
11 Zanfnovich's vehicle followed Tafalla's when passing the cara-12 van, and as Tafalla's vehicle was turning left after completing the 13 pass. Zaninovich saw Tafalla's face. He was familiar with Tafalla from 14 Tafalla's past work with Respondent's employees. I do not credit 15 Tafalla's cursory denial of the episode.

16 Arturo Castro--Mr. Castro was another business agent assigned 17 to the Delano office and who assisted in servicing the Respondent's past 18 collective bargaining agreement with VBZ. He was involved in two 19 events.

20 The first event was described by Vincent Zaninovich, another 21 part owner of VBZ., Mr. Zaninovich had pulled his vehicle out on one of 22 the roads surrounding VBZ property, after he had observed two vehicles 23 following some workers. After he pulled out, one of the other two 24 vehicles stopped and Mr. Castro got out; Castro, reaching into the back-25 seat area of his vehicle, began throwing rocks at Zaninovich from about 26 80 feet away. Four or five rocks were thrown. Zaninovich subsequently 27 confronted Castro by accusing him of throwing rocks, when Castro came to 28 VBZ's office days later, and Castro responded by saying he only did what he was told. The testimony does not establish that any employees viewed Castro's rock-throwing."

After Castro denied in his testimony the episode described by Zaninovich or that he threw rocks on any other occasion, a rebuttal witness, Deputy Sheriff Kliever, described Errs observation of Castro throwing a rock at Jack Pandol, Jr., who was at VBZ harvesting some crops. As the workers were in the field working, and as Pandol was walking down one of the roads, Castro was seen picking up and throwing a dirt clod, hitting Pandol in the back of the head. Pandol was about 20 to 25 feet from Castro; no other persons were within 10 feet of Pandol when he was hit.

As a result of his observation, Kliever placed Castro under arrest. When that incident occurred, Pete Maturino was 1 present. He immediately came up to Kliever's patrol car, telling 2 Castro not to resist the officer.

3 Roy Mendoza and Johnny Macias--Mendoza and Macias were both 4 business agents of the Respondent, Macias being from the Coachella area.
5 Only Macias testified, and he was not questioned about the incident now 6 described.

7 On a day in late August or early September, Manuel 8 Goree, a VBZ worker, was driving a VBZ truck loaded with grapes 9 from the field to the shed. It was about 5:00 p.m. As he was 10 driving he passed five persons leaning against a car in the 11 road; Respondent's picket signs were also leaned against the 12 same car. When Goree and his two companions passed the men the 13 five began throwing rocks at the truck. One of the men was Roy 14 Mendoza, as recognized by Goree (who had seen Mendoza at the 15 hearing and also identified him from a photograph); another was 16 Macias. Both threw rocks at Goree's truck, but Mendoza had also 17 charged toward the truck, heaving a rock at the truck's wind 18 shield, breaking it and spewing glass on Goree's two fellow-19 workers. Each of those two workers received minor cuts from the 20 shattered glass, one being cut over his right eye and the other 21 cut on his neck.

22 Goree also had an encounter with Mendoza earlier that day.
23 When Goree was at the VBZ shed at about noon in his truck, Mendoza was 24 there, shouting at him to get out of the truck and that he (Goree) was 25 going to get it after work. After those incidents, and after witnessing 26 a fire on the VBZ property, Goree quit his job.

27 In addition to the incidents involving Manuel Goree, Roy 28 Mendoza was also observed one day with a camera. Fred Lopez observed Mendoza pointing his camera at workers who were working despite the strike as if Mendoza was taking their pictures, although Lopez was not certain that Mendoza was actually taking pictures. (At the time in question, Mendoza worked on the staff of Respondent's newspaper.)

Imelda Lopez--Ms. Lopez is another business agent who participated in the strike. She did not testify.

Louis Caratan described an incident involving Ms. Lopez.
Caratan worked for his own company which purchased some of VBZ's crops. Caratan's employees, also represented by the Respondent, were in the field harvesting the crop.

While work was in progress, Caratan observed Lopez walking down one of the vineyard roads. Some 50 to 100 people

1 were in that road, including picketers, Respondent's business agents, 2 workers, and police. Maturino was one of those present.

3 There were packing stands by the side of the road, where grape 4 boxes also stood full in stacks.

5 Caratan first noticed Lopez walking by one of the stacks of 6 grape boxes, noticing her swing her hip in an exaggerated fashion against 7 one of the stacks, causing the stack to teeter. She kept on walking. When 8 she came upon another stack some 20 feet away Lopez was observed hiping 9 that stack as well; the stack fell over, the top four boxes spilling 10 their contents and ruining the grapes.

11 Contrary to Caratan who testified that no one was 12 within six feet of Lopez when she knocked over the stack, one of the 13 Respondent's attorneys testified that Ms. Lopez was more or less bumped 14 into the stack of grape boxes. Mr. Horner testified that he was walking 15 behind Lopez when a worker backed into her from her left, and she in turn 16 bumped the grape boxes, knocking over some two or three boxes.^{13/}

18 Consuelo Delgado Gonzales--Ms. Gonzales was also a 19 business agent of the Respondent. She was involved in numerous 20 incidents.

21 Several of the incidents involving Gonzales are uncontested.
22 inasmuch as she made no appearance as a witness in this proceeding. On 23 August 26, she was observed by Deputy Sheriff Bobby Davis throwing a bottle 24 at a truck carrying employees into the VBZ field. Some five or six 25 vehicles were entering the field; Gonzales was among some 10 or 12 persons 26 standing in the area. The bottle missed the truck and broke on the road.
27 She was then arrested by Davis. ^{14/}

28 _____
^{13/}Despite the conflict in testimony, I conclude that Lopez did not accidentally knock over the grape boxes. First, no doubt exists in my mind that Caratan's recollection was in earnest, as he immediately called over one of the deputy sheriffs and placed Lopez under a citizen's arrest. Horner, on the other hand, although present when Lopez was accosted by the deputy, apparently made no effort to explain what he had seen. I do not doubt Horner's veracity, but I question the strength and accuracy of observation. Furthermore, Lopez made no effort to salvage any of the spilled grape boxes she knocked over but walked on, a doubtful response from someone who accidentally knocks over a stack of grape boxes in the vicinity of some 50 to 100 people.

1 On August 25, as 10 to 12 cars of workers were driving 2 In caravan fashion on Road 208, which bordered VBZ property, two 3 cars traveling in the opposite direction pulled into the cara-4 van's driving lane, forcing the first two workers' cars off onto 5 the road's shoulder. Deputy Sheriff Landers observed the inci-6 dent and arrested Leo Cortez, another of Respondent's business 7 agents, for reckless driving. The second vehicle which followed 8 Cortez into the oncoming caravan was driven by Consuelo Gonzales 9 according to Marty Zaninovich, who observed the incident from a 10 parallel roadway.

11 On August 26, Jerry Ince went to the VBZ property to repair 12 some flat tires; he was employed by a local repair shop. As he was 13 leaving the property, driving from the entrance, he noticed some 15 to 14 20 people scattered by the roadside. One of those, a woman, bent down, 15 made an under-handed throwing motion, and Ince then saw a Tijuana Tack in 16 front of his vehicle. Ince could see the Tack in the road in front of 17 his vehicle and swerved around it ^{15/} As he went around the Tack, the 18 woman who had made the throwing motion looked at him and continued 19 looking at him. Mr. Ince brought Deputy Sheriff Yandell back with him, 20 pointing out the woman. The woman, about five foot three inches tall, 21 around 30 years of age, identified herself as Consuelo Gonzales. Ince's 22 testimony does not establish whether any VBZ employees observed the 23 incident.

24 The General Counsel also charges that Ms. Gonzales committed 25 several other acts, albeit the "victims" could not identify Ms.
26 Gonzales by name. Rather, the General Counsel contends that Ms. Gonzales 27 was commonly known to employees as "La Tigressa" (the tigress) and, 28 under that pseudonym, Ms. Gonzales's identity can be established.

More than a preponderance of proof convinces me that, despite various denials by Respondent's business agents, Ms.

^{14/}(continued)--to Deputy Sheriff Lutz that she was throwing at a security guard's vehicle and not at the workers. My notes indicate that Gonzales's admission to Lutz occurred on September 1, but that the bottle-throwing incident occurred on August 26. It could be that rather than constitute two separate incidents, the events described followed one another on the same day, as the Charging Party claims.

^{15/}A Tijuana Tack, referred to as a "star" by some, is a four pointed object. No matter how it lands one point is always up. It is a device that makes simple the flattening of tires.

1 Gonzales was one and the same as La Tigressa. Thus, employees contacted by 2 Board Agent Lopez frequently referred to La Tigressa, and many of them 3 also called her Connie. One even Identified her as Connie Gonzales. Deputy 4 Sheriff Davis heard people on the Respondent's picket lines call Gonzales La 5 Tigressa. Mrs. Galvan, a worker, heard people calling the person she 6 knew as La Tigressa by the name of Connie. And, only one person appearing 7 through the testimony, or known to have taken part in the strike, was named 8 Connie--namely, Consuelo Gonzales. Accordingly, I conclude that La 9 Tigressa was a name by which Consuelo Gonzales was known.^{16/}

11 Consuelo Gonzales, known as La Tigressa, was also involved In 12 two other incidents. First, she was seen by Maria Olvera, a VBZ worker, 13 throwing rocks at" workers' cars which were traveling in a caravan from 14 work. La Tigressa, riding in a pick-up truck, passed the caravan, 15 hurtling rocks at all the cars in the caravan.

17 Second, Mrs. Galvan was the unfortunate victim of Ms 18 Gonzales. In late August, as she and another woman worker were heading 19 home from the VBZ property. La Tigressa, in her red Torino, pulled in 20 front of the Galvan vehicle, and a van pulled behind it. The three cars 21 traveled at high speed, the Torino weaving back and forth in front of 22 Galvan. Attempting to escape, Mrs. Galvan, a short", heavy woman 52 23 years of age, pulled off into a grocery store lot. But, to no avail

25 As Galvan left her car heading for the store the man who had 26 driven the van, dressed in a Teamster jacket, got out and slashed two of 27 Gal van's tires. Not to be outdone, Gonzales got out of her Torino and 28 slashed the other two. At that point Gonzales grabbed Galvan by the hair and attempted to slap her. Galvan was held from behind by the Teamsterdressed man, and others who had arrived in the meantime, also dressed in various Teamster paraphernalia, stood watching the wrestling match between Galvan, held from behind, and La Tigressa. Eventually, Galvan got into the store and the fracas ended, but not before those who were with Gonzales cheered her on to hit the older woman again. Galvan made a report to the Sheriff's Department; Deputy Mart Inez, who helped her to make her report, observed the four flattened tires on Galvan's vehicle.

25 ^{16/} In addition, on at least two occasions, Ms. Gonzales 26 was associated with incidents while driving a red Torino. Testimony 27 established that Gonzales owned and drove a red or brown Torino.
28 Finally, the general physical description of Gonzales fits closely with the one attributed to La Tigressa.

1 Pete Maturino--Mr. Maturino was the senior business agent in 2 the Delano office. He was in overall charge or control of Respondent's 3 strike activity, directing the other business agents as well as issuing 4 whatever equipment was necessary. He was also present at the VBZ property 5 every day during the strike for about six hours a day. Maturino is 6 charged by the General Counsel with personally engaging in misconduct, 7 which Maturino denied.

8 As earlier noted, Mr. and Mrs. Lopez (the wife calling 9 herself Soledad Barajas) sought work at VBZ and were eventually chased 10 from VBZ by Louis Uribe and a companion. Earlier in that same day they 11 also encountered Mr. Maturino. As they were driving in the area of 12 Avenue 2k and Road 208, at about 7:00 a.m., they passed by a group 13 standing with picket signs. One man, standing by the side of the road, 14 wearing a Teamster jacket (one which is blue with the Teamsters' yellow 15 insignia on its front), threw either a rock or dirt-clod at the Lopez 16 vehicle, hitting it in the rear. The man made his throw from about 10 17 feet away. Mrs. Lopez identified him from a photograph as Mr. Pete 18 Maturino.^{17/}

19 Pete Ramirez, Jr., another worker, testified in respect to 20 an incident involving Maturino which occurred on September 2. Ramirez 21 drove one of the Employer's trucks from the vineyard onto Avenue 24, 22 heading for the cold storage area. After his truck was jumped on by 23 someone from among those picketing, he was followed by a Chevy Nova 24 about two to three miles, being passed by the Nova en route. As 25 Ramirez and his two fellow workers then approached the intersection at 26 Road 208, a man from the Nova got out with a board in his hand. Ramirez 27 refused to stop at the stop sign and, as he was passing the man, the man 28 threw the board at the side of the truck. Ramirez identified Pete Maturino as the man, after looking at a photograph.^{18/}

^{17/}Mr. Lopez was shown the same photograph as his wife and, although he recognized Maturino, Lopez was unable to identify him as the one who threw at his car. While it may seem difficult to reconcile the difference in identification between Mr. and Mrs. Lopez, I have concluded that Mrs. Lopez's identification should be credited. She testified in detailed fashion for the most part, demonstrating strong recollection. Her husband, on the other hand, seemed confused during his testimony and, at times, uncertain of what he was being asked.

^{18/}Maturino acknowledged throwing a "stick" at the truck, saying he did so out of anger because the truck almost ran him over. I do not credit Maturino's version. No explanation was given by Maturino as to why he had first -- (continued)

1 Maturino was also identified by a VBZ foreman, Benjamin 2 Cepriano, as having come into the field during lunch when some 70 3 workers were eating. Maturino was accompanied by others. Cepriano 4 testified that Maturino told the workers they should join the 5 strike, after which he told them that if they did not they would be 6 fined $500.00 and blacklisted. Maturino also told them that if they 7 did not join the strike, he would see them in the afternoon, after qui-8 tting time, and "you will see what will happen." (Cepriano recalled 9 having heard similar statements made by those he considered 10 "organizers" many times.)

11 Two incidents were described which involve Maturino 12 and VBZ representatives. Marty Zaninovich recalled that on one 13 occasion he approached two workers who had been talking with 14 Maturino and Efren Gonzales in the field. When Marty told the 15 workers to start loading grapes, Maturino challenged him to go 16 into the fields and settle things. Marty then called his 17 brother, Vincent, from his truck, and Vincent arrived on the 18 scene very shortly.^{19/}

19 The second occasion involved Andrew Zaninovich, one of the 20 primary owners of VBZ. He drove into the field one day, stopping where 21 Maturino and Efren Gonzales were standing. When Zaninovich attempted 22 to open his door, Maturino swung his elbow toward his face, stopping 23 just short of hitting Zaninovich. Gonzales then grabbed the open door 24 and slammed it shut on Zaninovich, banging it into Zaninovich's knee.
25 Testimony indicates that employees were not present at the time.^{20/}

26 Still another incident occurred between Maturino and 27 ^{18/}(continued)--followed and then passed the truck, driving 28 some three miles, and then got out of the Nova with a stick in his hand at a place where the truck had to pass. Mischief appears as the reason.

29 ^{19/}Maturino and Gonzales differed among themselves as to what 30 happened between them and Marty Zaninovich. Gonzales claimed that-Tony 31 Zaninovich pulled up to them fast and swore at them, while Marty was 32 just standing there. Maturino claimed that Marty stopped abruptly when 33 someone from the picket lines yelled, getting out of his vehicle, 34 and challenged Maturino to a fight. I credit the version of Marty 35 Zaninovich.

36 ^{20/}Again the testimony of Maturino and Gonzales differs as to 37 this incident. Maturino acknowledged that Gonzales shut Zaninovich's 38 door, while Gonzales denied doing anything other than just holding the door in an open position. In fact, Maturino acknowledged that he had heard Zaninovich's knee was hurt.

1 Deputy Sheriff Landers. On September 3, Landers approached Maturino 2 shortly before 6:00 a.m., taking a photograph of the senior business 3 agent. Maturino's response was to raise and clench his fist and stalk 4 toward Landers, stopping only a foot or two away. Landers arrested 5 Maturino for assault.

6 No workers were present at that early morning hour. Two of 7 Maturino's companions at the scene, however, denied that Maturino 8 assaulted Landers, claiming instead that Landers bumped Maturino with 9 his hip, knocking Maturino off balance. Their testimony was refuted not 10 just by Landers but by two other deputy sheriffs who had been standing 11 across the road, all of them describing how Maturino had actually 12 walked some eight to 10 feet toward Landers and gestured as if to strike 13 the officer. I credit the deputies¹ testimony.

14 One final episode directly involves Mr. Maturino. On or 15 about August 30, Deputy Landers received a radio report that a silver El 16 Camino was chasing a blue Ford on VBZ property, and Maturino was 17 identified as the driver. Landers located a blue Ford, belonging to 18 Lupe Trevino, a worker, which was stopped. The back window was broken, a 19 hole was in it and shattered glass spread across the back seat. Trevino 20 was there with her five passengers.

21 According to Trevino¹'s testimony, she had been chased that 22 morning by a grey El Camino with two men in it. She had driven very 23 fast to avoid the follower. At one point she slowed and looked in her 24 rear-view mirror, seeing the EL Camino's passenger with a baseball 25 bat. At that point she heard a loud crash and her back window was broken.
26 The El Camino sped off, Landers, when he investigated, noticed not just 27 that the window was broken but that a small dent by the window existed in 28 Trevino's blue Ford.^{21/}

The report involving Trevino's car damage was broadcast over the police radio, being picked up by Deputy Davis. At the time he heard the report, Davis saw a silver El Camino and followed it. The car eventually stopped on its own, apparently among other vehicles carrying Respondent's personnel. Various

^{21/} Trevino's testimony cited above was given in the Tulare County contempt action and was introduced into the record in this proceeding under Evidence Code Section 1291. The General Counsel was able to show that all reasonable efforts had been made to obtain Trevino as a witness for this proceeding, but that her whereabouts were now unknown. The Respondent, of course, was the Defendant in the contempt action, and its counsel in that proceeding was afforded the opportunity to cross-examine Trevino.

1 officers pulled up by the El Camino; Pete Maturino was identi-2 fied as the driver and Daniel Oligario as the passenger of the 3 El Camino. Oligario was another of Respondent's business agents

4 When they stopped, both Deputy Davis and Deputy 5 Yandell noticed a baseball bat in the El Camino. Yandell re-6 moved the bat, at which point Maturino indignantly told him to 7 keep his "fucking hands off my property." When Yandell observed 8 the bat, he noticed what appeared to be blue paint on the bat.
9 Landers made a similar observation shortly afterward. Yandell 10 noticed another substance on it that appeared to be glass.

11 Trevino was unable to personally identify Maturino as a 12 participant in the assault on her car. But, she identified 13 the car he was driving as the vehicle which had been following 14 her, carrying the men who had broken her window.

15 Maturino's testimony concerning this Trevino episode 16 is interesting. Although he denied breaking Trevino's window.
17 his main concern seemed to be that no identification was made by 18 her. His testimony certainly did not indicate that he ever 19 manifested any concern over the incident or interest in 20 discovering what had happened.22/

21 Based on the circumstantial evidence, I conclude that 22 Maturino drove that silver El Camino which carried the 23 passenger who reached out the window, striking Lupe Trevino's 24 rear window, shattering it among her five passengers. From the 25 sequence of the events in question, little or no other conclusion 26 is possible from the evidence.

27 3. Incidents Indirectly Identified With the Respondent

28 For a number of incidents cited in the record no direct link was drawn between the alleged misconduct and personal identification of the perpetrator. Nonetheless, the General

22/During his testimony, Maturino claimed he made efforts to see that violence was avoided during the strike. To support his claim he described another incident where he had learned that someone's daughter was hit with a rock while traveling in a car on VBZ property. He came up to the father and asked him if he knew who had thrown the rock, then suggesting to the father (who was at the time caring for his daughter) that if he wished to avoid such troubles again he should look for another job.

1 Counsel argues that sufficient Identifying features exist regarding 2 such acts of misconduct as to establish them as committed by the 3 Respondent. Again, in discussing the alleged misconduct little or no 4 effort is made to specify exact dates; rather, the general period of 5 August 24 to September 3 is the time frame in question.

6 (a) Acts Committed by Those Wearing Teamster 7 Paraphernalia:

8 The record is replete with incidents occurring at the 9 hands of persons, exact Identity unknown, who were wearing so-called 10 "Teamster jackets" or Teamster caps or Teamster buttons. Each of the 11 foregoing symbols was a distinctive marking, either containing the 12 name of the "Teamsters" or the Respondent's emblem. Respondent strongly 13 argues that such insignia, particularly Teamster jackets, were 14 available to the public, and that such paraphernalia were not 15 necessarily worn by Respondent business agents or other agents.

16 Although it may be true that one need not be 17 either a business agent or member of the Respondent to wear 18 something like a Teamster jacket, it is also true that of all 19 those present during the VBZ strike, the Teamster jackets and 20 other insignia were worn only by those participating in the 21 strike. Thus, Teamster jackets, buttons, and caps were seen on 22 recognized business agents or on others standing on picket 23 lines. Not one instance has been cited where a VBZ employee or 24 representative, who worked during the strike, wore such para-25 phernalia. On the contrary, only those picketing, soliciting 26 support for the strike, and business agents wore Teamster jac 27 kets and other insignia. Incidents involving such persons are 28 briefly discussed below.

(1) On August 26, when he began his investigation, Fred Lopez of the Board noticed a car with slashed tires at the VBZ property. Workers were standing by the car. A man, unknown to Lopez came by, wearing a Teamster jacket and button. When the man was asked by the workers present why the tires were slashed, he responded, " If you work during a strike, you have to expect it. "

(2) On the first day of the strike, August 24, Chris Nacua, a foreman, was getting ready to go into the field to work. In the VBZ parking lot sat five women workers. Two men in Teamster jackets approached them, and Nacua could overhear their conversation. Nacua was just leaving the women, after telling them where they would work that day. The two Teamster-dressed men told the women that if they crossed the

1 picket line they were going to get hurt or busted 2 up, The women did not work that day.

3 Shortly after the foregoing conversation, 4 the two men approached Nacua, who was getting his bus ready to drive into 5 the field. One of the men told Nacua that he better not take employees into 6 the field that day or someone was going to get hurt. The man also told 7 Nacua, "I know you."

8 (3) Manuel Galvan, whose wife had an encounter with La 9 Tigressa, was working by himself on August 28, about two miles away from 10 other workers. He was on a tractor when two men approached him, men who were 11 wearing Teamster jackets and' buttons. They asked him what he was doing he 12 said he was working. They told him to stop. After he said that he had been 13 told there was an injunction, the men told him it was not worth anything.
14 The men then told him to quit working or they "would beat the mother out of 15 him" (an English version of what was said in Spanish), which Galvan took 16 as a death threat. The two men approached Galvan, coming within two feet 17 from him, and each pulled a knife.

18 (4) Eliseo Cepriano, a worker and Teamster 19 member, came to work on August 24 not knowing of the strike. He was stopped 20 by two men wearing Teamster jackets, who he had not seen before. They told 21 him of the strike, saying that if he" worked he would be fined $500.00 and 22 blacklisted from all Teamster contracts. Cepriano netted about $700.00 per 23 month at the time.

24 (5) As Josephina Morena, another VBZ employee, was 25 beginning work on August 24 her crew of about 40 was approached by some 15 26 persons wearing Teamster jackets. One of them addressed the workers. He not 27 only wore a Teamster jacket, but also wore a button and cap; Morena 28 recognized him as someone she had seen at Respondent's office in Delano.
The man said the workers should not work and that they would be pulled out anyway they could be. The man who spoke said he (or they) would return and then the employees would learn who they were, and that they (the workers) would be sorry if they did not leave. When he was speaking the man clinched and gestured with his fist.

 One of Morena's fellow workers came up to where they were standing. The worker was told by one of the Teamster-jacketed people that she should leave or an ambulance would be brought the next day.

 On a subsequent day, after Morena had arrived home, she noticed a car circle about her house. The car

1 then pulled up directly in front of her house, about 20 feet from the 2 entrance. One of those in the car was someone Morena recognized from the 3 August 24 encounter; the other three wore Teamster jackets. The car sat 4 for five minutes and one of the men in it exhibited a pencil and paper, 5 making a writing motion. As he did so, he looked directly at Morena's 6 house number, which was visible from where the car was.

7 (6) Maria Olvera one day drove the last car out of a 8 VBZ entrance in a car caravan. Several persons were gathered around the 9 entrance, wearing Teamster buttons. One of the men there wrote something 10 down and said they had her license number. Olvera was not sure who yelled 11 it , but someone shouted they were going to bust up their cars.

12 (b) Conduct Associated with the Picket Line;

13 At nearly, if not every, entrance to the VBZ property groups 14 were gathered, picketing. Sometimes they carried picket signs, other 15 times they did not. Those gathered at the entrances were associated with 16 other conduct cited in the testimony.

17 (1) Fred Lopez, who spent many days at the VBZ 18 property, observed an unknown person, who was picketing and carrying a 19 picket sign, throw a rock at one of the Employer's trucks. The truck 20 was carrying grape boxes. That incident occurred on August 30.

21 On a previous occasion, on August 26, Lopez was 22 confronted as he entered the VBZ property by a person he recognized as a 23 representative for the Respondent at past Board elections. Lopez also 24 recognized him from the photograph of business agents that hung at the 25 Respondent's Delano office. The man told Lopez he better not enter the 26 property unless he wanted his tires flattened. By observation, Lopez 27 could see nails were scattered over the road he was to take.

28 (2) On August 27, after he informed the Respondent that negotiations would not continue, Joseph Herman, an attorney for the Respondent, began to leave the motel room where the parties met. As he left, one from the group standing by the door poked Herman in the ribs, saying "better watch out Red." Herman had red hair.

(3) During the two-week strike, Foreman Nacua heard over a loudspeaker someone calling out names of employees, saying
"we know where you live ." Nacua was in the field working with about 100 workers at the time. Evidence establishes that the Respondent used two loudspeakers and one megaphone during the 1 strike, operated mainly by business agents.

2 On another occasion, Nacua observed two men 3 dressed in Teamster jackets saying similar things--namely, telling 4 employees the men knew who they were and knew their cars. The two men came on the 5 property during a lunch break.

6 (4) Mrs. Galvan also heard people saying that if 7 the workers did not honor the strike they would not be able to 8 work anywhere there was a Teamster contract. The people who said such 9 things came on the property during the strike.

10 (5) Mario Gutierrez, a security guard, was res-11 ponsible for following those believed to be Respondent agents 12 when they came on the property to talk with employees. One day after he followed 13 two men around, listening to them tell employees about Respondent's 14 activities, one of the men told Gutierrez he did not have to follow 15 them anymore. The man also told Gutierrez, in front of employees, that 16 if they saw him on the road they would broadside him. One of the two men 17 was wearing a Teamster jacket.

18 (6) Marty Zaninovich testified that one day when 19 he was driving on the property with an employee, a person standing among those 20 picketing threw a half-full can of Seven-Up, hitting Zaninovich through 21 the window.

22 (7) Several witnesses testified that those picketing the 23 entrances stood in front of vehicles entering the property, or slapped 24 and kicked at vehicles going onto VBZ property. At times Respondent's 25 business agents were identified at such scenes.

26 (8) On occasion, as noted, Tijuana Tacks were 27 thrown or seen on VBZ property. These Tacks made their appearance 28 several days after the strike began; the first few days hundreds--if not thousands--of roofing nails were seen in various VBZ entrances. Neither the Tacks nor the nails were seen before the strike; nor were they present much after September 3.

Controversy surrounds the identity of those responsible for placing the Tacks on the many roadways on which they were found. But, certain facts do emerge, despite the controversy.

On several occasions, persons identified with the Respondent were seen throwing Tijuana Tacks. Thus, Consuelo Gonzales was seen throwing one at a vehicle driven by Jerry Ince. Marty Zaninovich claimed to have seen one of the 1 picketers throw one. Fred Lopez was warned by a recognized Teamster 2 about driving his vehicles over tacks in the road. One of Respondent's 3 business agents, Mohamed Abdullah, admitted seeing strikers throw a 4 "few" tacks. Efren Gonzales admitted the same. And, in one of the 5 video tapes in evidence, we hear Louis Uribe warning Jack Pandol about 6 sitting on tacks as Pandol was about to leave.

7 In addition, on one occasion Security Guard 8 Gutierrez observed several people picking up pieces of paper in a 9 roadway, returning the paper, and kicking dirt around. He viewed them 10 with binoculars. On a subsequent check where "the men had been 11 standing Gutierrez found Trjuana Tacks in the dirt and under paper 12 wrappings, one being found in a milk carton which Gutierrez had 13 observed one of the men pick up and put back in the road. Before he 14 observed the men, Gutierrez checked that same area for tacks or nails 15 and had found none. But, before he subsequently investigated the same 16 spot again and discovered the newly placed Tacks, he lost sight for 17 some minutes of that area where the Tacks were found.23/

18 4. Conduct Where No Perpetrator Was Identified

19 Several incidents noted in the testimony, over Respondent's 20 strong objections, were incidents for which no perpetrator could be 21 singled out or identified. As we will see, some of those incidents 22 were serious.

23 (a) On August 24 Andrew Zaninovich discovered that 11 to 12 24 acres of grape vines had been cut and destroyed. The cuts, he 25 believed made by pruning shears, were at the base of the vines. He 26 was of the opinion that the cuts were made sometime around August 21 or 27 22, it taking some two to three days for the vines to discolor and be 28 discovered. Zaninovich testified that workers had not been in those fields recently. The estimate of the crop damage was approximately $40,000.00. Zaninovich could not identify anyone responsible for the vine cutting.

(b) As earlier noted, on the evening of August 27 the 23/Gutierrez subsequently spoke with one of the men he had observed on the roadway. Dressed in his uniform, Gutierrez joked with the man about being up to their old tricks of planting Tijuana Tacks.

The man, unknown to Gutierrez, just laughed. During their conversation, the man explained he was from Coalinga and had been brought to Delano. He said he hoped the strike could be settled so he could go home.

1 four tires of Fred Lopez's state-marked vehicle were slashed in a motel 2 parking lot. Lopez did not observe who committed the slashing. But, 3 shortly after he discovered the slashing, a man came by the car and said 4 something about the tires. The man bent down, took out a switch-blade 5 knife, and stuck it into one of the inch-long slashes. The man said 6 "ft just fits doesn't it." Although Lopez did not know the man's 7 name, he knew him by sight, and had been told earlier that evening by 8 the man that he was now with the Teamsters.

10 (c) Several fires occurred on VBZ property or adjoining 11 property during the strike. Although identification of possible 12 arsonists was not specifically made, in some cases suggestions were put 13 forward.

15 One fire involved grape boxes on Avenue 24.
16 Shortly before the fire, Marty Zaninovich noticed a man standing or 17 kneeling within about five feet from the stack of grape boxes; the man 18 wore levies and a tan shirt. Zaninovich was about 150 yards away. The 19 man looked at Zaninovich and left the area, Zaninovich then driving 20 around the vineyard toward the man. Zaninovich drove by the man who got 21 into a gold Dodge and drove away; at one point Zaninovich was 20 feet 22 from the man. About one minute after the man left the boxes a fire burst 23 out, which Zaninovich himself extinguished.

25 Zaninovich did not know the man. But, he saw him later 26 driving in a caravan of cars in which Respondent's business agents were 27 driving, saw him subsequently wearing a Teamster jacket on Road 208, 28 and saw him talking to workers during breaks while the strike was in progress.

30 A second fire also involved grape boxes. Deputy Sheriff 31 Landers investigated the fire of unknown origin. This fire also 32 occurred on Avenue 24, on August 28. As part of his investigation 33 Landers spoke with three of Respondent's business agents who were 34 standing some 60 feet from the fire, Bernard Calantis, Fred Rugnao, 35 and Mohamed Abdullah. When first confronted the three business agents 36 all denied being in the immediate area of the fire. Landers then went 37 back to the fire scene; he discovered a shoe print. After returning to 38 the three business agents and telling Calantis that the shoe print appeared similar to Calantis's, Calantis then said he had been in the area earlier that day on his way to speak with employees. Landers discovered no natural cause for the fire.

40 A third fire involved an irrigation pump, which 41 had not been used for a week or two before. A fire investigator was 42 called in from the California Fire Service, Jerry Clark.

1 Upon investigation Mr. Clark discovered that a large quantity of 2 newspapers had been stuffed under the pump; he could discern the 3 paper's charred remains. His expert conclusion was that the pump had 4 been set on fire deliberately by using the paper. That fire occurred 5 on September 3.

6 On September 1 another fire had occurred, burning 7 styrofoam boxes on the back of a truck. (This may be the fire " on the 8 Sandrini property, which adjoined VBZ.) The fire is preserved for 9 posterity by the video tapes placed into evidence. No identification 10 of a perpetrator was made. But, some 40 to 60 people were standing in 11 the area, persons who Deputy Yandell recognized as participants in the 12 strike. None of them helped to extinguish the fire, and many of them 13 were yelling, cheering about the fire, shouting "huelga."24/

C. The Respondent's Strike Supervision:

Three basic means of supervising the strike were brought out through the testimony of Respondent's witnesses. First, each morning of the strike, at about 4:00 or 5:00 a.m., Respondent's business agents gathered together in the Delano office, receiving instructions from Pete Maturino. According to their testimony, brief as it was on the point, instructions were given that no threats to workers should be made and that no violence should be committed. Mr. Maturino asserted that he gave his instructions not because he was aware of any violence or misconduct at VBZ, but because he had seen violence in past strikes in other locations.

Second, after the temporary restraining order was issued, two of Respondent's attorneys met with Respondent's business agents. The meeting occurred on or about August 30. The attorneys went through the restraining order's provisions or summarized them, and strongly instructed their listeners that the order should be obeyed. No protest, question, or discussion in regard to the restraining order was raised by the business agents present who heard the attorneys' instructions.

24/Other incidents were also described in the testimony. Dudley Steele, one of those who purchased some of VBZ's crops during the strike, was driving his truck on VBZ property when a missile shot through his rear window, leaving a small hole and a large explosion. Two of VBZ's foremen, Nacua and Padllo, were driving when someone Nacua could not identify threw a rock through Padillo's windshield. Other incidents may also appear in the evidence.

1 Third, Mr. Maturino assigned certain business agents like 2 Tafalla and Castro to specific picketing duty--namely, to take charge of 3 picketing at specific entrances. These business agents in turn instructed 4 the pickets that they should engage in no threats toward the workers or any 5 violent conduct. The picketers were also instructed to retrieve and remove 6 any Tijuana Tacks they observed in the roadways.

7 ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

8 I. Introduction.

9 The center-piece of our Act is Section 1152, a broad-ranging 10 guarantee of protection for agricultural employees. That section protects 11 their right to self-organization, "to form, join, or assist labor 12 organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their 13 own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities . . . ," as 14 well as protecting their right "to refrain from any or all of such 15 activities" One means of enforcing that broad protection is found 16 in Section 1154(a)(1) of the Act, which prohibits labor organizations 17 from restraining or coercing employees "In the exercise of the rights 18 guaranteed in Section 1152." A similar protection is found in Section 19 8(b)(1)(A) of the National Labor Relations Act, as amended (29 U.S.C.
20 Sec. 151, et. seq.; hereafter referred to as the "NLRA"), and our Act 21 directs that we follow such precedent as is "applicable" under the NLRA.

22 When reviewing Section 8(b)(1)(A) of the NLRA, the 23 United States Supreme Court observed that the provision was a 24 grant of power to the NLRB "to proceed against union tactics in 25 involving violence, intimidation, and reprisal or threats thereof-- 26 conduct involving more than the general pressures upon persons 27 employed by the affected employers implicit in economic strikes." 28 N.L.R.B. v. Local 639, Teamsters Union, 362 U.S. 274, 290 (1960).
A similar viewpoint is appropriate under Section 1154(a)(1) of our Act, particularly inasmuch as the California Legislature sought by its enactment of our statute "to ensure peace in the agricultural fields" and "to bring certainty and a sense of fair play to a presently unstable and potentially volatile condition in the state." The Act, Section 1.

Under our sister statute, the NLRA, numerous kinds of labor organization conduct have been found to be unlawful restraint and coercion. Such unlawful conduct, specifically in strike situations, is briefly outlined below.

1. Under the NLRA it has been consistently held that mass picketing and blocking the ingress and egress to an

1 employer's premises are unlawful. Nor, as several of the cited cases 2 indicate, is it necessary that such conduct must actually result in 3 blocking or stopping workers from entering their work place.
4 N.L.R.B. v. United Mine Workers of America, 429 F.2d 141 146 (C.A. 3, 5 1973); N.L.R.B. v. Taxicab Drivers, Local 777, 340 F.2d 905, 907
6 (C.A. 7, 1964); N.L.R.B. v. Local 140, United Furniture Workers, 233
7 F.2d 539 (C.A. 2, 1956); Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Local 6, 79 8 NLRB 1487 (1948).

9 2. Threats of violence and violence itself directed against 10 employees are forms of unlawful restraint and coercion. New Power Wire & 11 Electric Corp. v. N.L.R.B., 340 F.2d 71 (C.A. 2, 1965); 12 N.L.R.B. v. United Brotherhood of Carpenters, 205 F.2d 515 (C.A.
13 10, 1953); Mid-States Metal Products, Inc., 156 NLRB 872, 898 14 (1966); Teamsters, Local 729, 189 NLRB 696, 697 (1970). Nor is it 15 necessary that such conduct actually succeed in restraining and 16 coercing employees, for the "test is whether the misconduct is such 17 that, under the circumstances existing, it may reasonably tend to 18 coerce or intimidate employees in the exercise of rights protected 19 under the Act." Local 542, Operating Engineers v. N.L.R.B., 328 F.2d 20 850, 852-3 (C.A. 3, 1964), cert, denied, 379 U.S. 826.

21 3. It is likewise unlawful to pursue nonstrikers or 22 menacingly follow them-away from their work site, to give the 23 impression of taking down nonstrikers¹ license numbers (or give the 24 impression of surveilling them), and to damage their property.
25 International Longshoremen's Union, supra, 79 NLRB 1487; Dover Corp., 26 211 NLRB 955, 958 (1974).

27 4. Threatening employees with the loss of employment for 28 engaging in protected activities is also unlawful. International Union of Operating Engineers, 205 NLRB No. 146 (1973), affirmed. 500
F.2d 48; Local 40, international Bro. of Boiler-makers, 197 NLRB 738 (1972).^{25/}

5. Finally, to engage in unlawful restraint and ^{25/}The NLRB has held, however, that it will not oversee or control the amount of internal fines levied by a labor organization. As stated by the Supreme Court, the NLRB is correct that Section 8(b)(1)(A) of the NLRA (the equivalent of our Section 1154(a)(1)) "has nothing to say about union fines . . . , whatever their size Issues as to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of such fines must be decided upon the basis of the law of contracts, voluntary associations, or such other principles of law as may be applied in a forum competent to adjudicate the issue." N.L.R.B. v. Boeing Co., et al., _____ U.S. _____, 83 LRRM 2183, 2185-6 (1973).

1 coercion a labor organization need not direct its misconduct only 2 at employees. Misconduct directed towards non-employees, even 3 outside the view of employees, is unlawful if the conduct is 4 reasonably certain to come to the attention of employees. Of 5 course, misconduct directed at others while in the presence of 6 employees (either non-strikers or strikers) is unlawful, since it 7 conveys to the employees what may happen to them if they act 8 contrary to the demands of the labor organization. See N. L. R. B.
9 v. Woodworkers, 243 F.2d 745 (C. A. 5, 1957); Retail Department 10 Store Union, 157 NLRB 615 (1966), enforced, 375 F.2d 745; Retail 11 Department Store Union, 133 NLRB 1555, 1566 (1961); Brooklyn 12 Spring Corp., 113 NLRB 815 (1955), enforced, 233 F.2d 539. And, 13 as one court remarked, "It is well established that '(d)estruction 14 of the employer's property restrains the employees in the exercise 15 of their rights . . . by threatening their jobs and by creating a 16 general atmosphere of fear and violence.'" United 17 Mine Workers, supra, 429 F.2d at 147.

18 II . The Respondent's Unlawful Restraint And Coercion .

19 Putting together those principles described in the next 20 preceding section with the conduct described in earlier portions of 21 this Decision, the conclusion necessarily follows that Respondent 22 engaged in conduct constituting unlawful restraint and coercion 23 within the meaning of Section 1154(a)(1) of the Act. Although in 24 some cases the Respondent cannot be held responsible for the 25 conduct described previously, a sufficient nexus is established 26 between much of the conduct in issue and the Respondent to establish 27 that Respondent pervasively violated its obligations to the 28 employees during Its two-week strike at VBZ.

Not less than 11 business agents of the Respondent were identified as engaging in misconduct during Respondent's strike at VBZ, including the Respondent's senior business agent in Delano and leader of the strike, Pete Maturino. These 11 agents were identified as committing over 20 unlawful acts, including such conduct as throwing rocks, dirt-clods, bottles, and boards at employees or others in the presence of employees, breaking windows of vehicles driven by workers, slashing tires of workers' vehicles, throwing Tijuana Tacks in front of automobiles and in roadways, driving in such a reckless manner as to cause workers to leave the road for fear of their safety, following workers from VBZ in what can only be described as a menacing manner, threatening employees with bodily harm or threatening others with bodily harm in the presence of employees, actually assaulting one worker, damaging the Employer's property in front of workers, and threatening employees with the 1 loss of work and large fines If they did not join in the 2 strike.^{26/}

3 Of all those acts previously identified with the Res-4 pondent's business agents, only one perhaps does not amount to a 5 violation of the Act. When Pete Maturino and Efren Gonzales 6 threatened Andrew Zaninovich by preventing him from exiting his truck 7 and by slamming the truck door on Zaninovich's knee, no employees were 8 present. The incident took place away from employees, and I have no 9 way of knowing whether it is reasonable to expect that such conduct, 10 directed towards a senior representative of VBZ who may or may not have 11 personal contact with workers would be made known to employees. See 12 International Ass'n of Machinists, 183 NLRB 1225, 1232 (1970). On 13 the other hand, Mr. Maturino's assault on Deputy Landers and Mr.
14 Gonzales's driving assault on Security Guard Gutierrez both occurred 15 either near where strikers were located or were acts likely to be 16 learned of by employees due to the participants involved and the 17 location of conduct. Accordingly, I find that Maturino's and 18 Gonzales's conduct towards Landers and Gutierrez violated the Act.

19 Little dispute can exist that the Respondent is accountable 20 for the conduct engaged in by Respondent's business agents. These 21 agents were brought by the Respondent to the Delano area to engage "in 22 its VBZ strike, were given some responsibility for overseeing the 23 strike action, and were regularly present on the picket lines at VBZ.
24 Indeed, several of them were given specific responsibility for the 25 picket conduct at particular locations. The law is well settled that 26 a labor organization is accountable for the conduct of business agents 27 clothed with authority to act for that labor organization, even if the 28 agents exceed their specific authority. See, N.L.R.B. v. Union Nacional De Trabajadores, ___ F.2d ___, 92 LRRM 3425, 3430. n. 7 (C.A. 1, 1976); Teamster Local 695 204 NLRB 866, 874(1973); Local 810, Steel, Metals, Alloys & Hardware Fabricators & TWarehousemen, 200 NLRB 575, 585 (1972). In this 26/Had Respondent's agents threatened only its members with the $500.00 fines, such threats might not constitute a violation of the Act, since "excessive" fines (and presumably threats thereof) do not fall within the conduct prohibited by Section 115Ma) (1), as noted earlier. The Respondent's threats, however, were not limited to only its members; rather, such threats were made indiscriminately in front of workers, and thus presumably made to and in front of those who were not members of the Respondent. Since a union's fining of non-members is unlawful under the NLRA, I conclude that threatening non-members with such fines constituted a violation of our Act. See

2 particular case, however, it would be difficult to conclude that 3 Respondent's business agents exceeded any limitations on their 4 authority, as the Respondent's strike-leader, Maturino, led all others 5 in unlawfully restraining and coercing workers who chose not to join in 6 the strike, thus setting a strong example for the others to follow.

8 As for the conduct engaged in by those not specifically 9 identified as Respondent's business agents, it might be well to quote 10 from International Ass'n of Machinists, 183 NLRB 1225, 1230-1 (1970):

12 It is settled that where, as in this case, a 13 picket line is the scene of repeated acts of 14 misconduct, to the knowledge of the union 15 conducting the picketing, the union has the duty 16 to take steps reasonably calculated effectively 17 to curb the misconduct, and failing this the 18 union may be held responsible for resulting 19 restraint and coercion of employees. (Numerous 20 cites omitted.)

22 Furthermore, even as to conduct occurring outside 23 the presence of acknowledged union agents and 24 without the knowledge of the union conducting the 25 picketing, the union may be held responsible for 26 such conduct where it follows a pattern established 27 by acknowledged union agents. * * * *

29 Or, as was stated in Int'l Union of Electrical Workers, 134 NLRB 1713, 30 1724 (1961), "As should have been expected, the pickets followed the 31 examples of their leaders and adopted their unlawful tactics as a course of 32 action for themselves both at and away from the picket lines. In these 33 circumstances the Respondents are statutorily responsible for the conduct 34 of the pickets at and away from the picket lines." Accord: Teamsters Local 35 115, 157 NLRB 1637, 1642-3 (1966).

36 37 One further point needs reference. Under the NLRA it has 38 been repeatedly held that where a labor organization is aware of 39 continual, unlawful misconduct occurring during a strike and does 40 nothing to curb that misconduct, the labor organization must be held 41 responsible for that misconduct. See Union Nacional De Trabajadores, 42 supra, 92 LRRM at 3430, n. 7; Teamsters Local 695, supra, 204 NLRB 43 866; Congress De Uniones Industriales, 163 NLRB 448, 452 (1967); 44 Teamsters Local 115, supra, 157 NLRB at 1643. Nor is it sufficient for 45 the labor

1 organization involved merely to issue peaceful directives in regard to 2 known misconduct, as the Respondent allegedly did each morning of the 3 strike, for the labor organization must take steps "reasonably calculated effectively to stop such acts." Teamsters Local 695, supra, 203 NLRB at 874; United Mine Workers, District 2, 170 NLRB 1581, 1592 (1968).

5 Under these foregoing standards, the Respondent herein must be 6 held responsible for a host of other misconduct, not necessarily engaged 7 in by its business agents. Thus, the misconduct noted which occurred on 8 or around the picket lines is conduct for which the Respondent is 9 accountable. Such conduct involved implicit threats of tire slashing, 10 Implicit and overt threats of bodily harm (including the ones made to Mr.
11 Herman and Mr. Gutierrez), threats of blacklisting, and throwing objects 12 at moving vehicles, all of which were directed at or occurred in the 13 presence of employees or strike supporters. In addition, I find that Respondent violated the Act by engaging in mass picketing, massing up to 14 some 70 pickets at a single entrance to VBZ, and by interfering with the workers¹ ingress and regress through various VBZ entrances by way of 15 standing in front of cars, slapping and kicking at such cars, and by 16 yelling implicit threats to employees who went through the entrances or 17 exits

18 Likewise, I conclude that Respondent must bear the 19 responsibility for the numerous roofing nails and Tijuana Tacks that were 20 thrown throughout the Employer's roadways and entrances. Not only were 21 Respondent's business agents seen throwing such objects, but it was 22 acknowledged that pickets as well threw them. Furthermore, such 23 destructive objects were found neither before nor after the Respondent's 24 strike, indicating their close association with the Respondent's strike 25 activity. The Respondent is further identified with the Tijuana Tacks 26 through warnings or threats made by its agents or pickets to Mr. Lopez of 27 the Board and to Mr. Pandol in regard to such objects. Although the 28 persons responsible for most of the nail and tack placement were not identified, there is a sufficient nexus of identification between the Respondent and the tire-destroying objects to conclude that Respondent was essentially responsible for their distribution and resulting damage.

Similarly, I conclude that Respondent is responsible for the conduct engaged in by those who, though not specifically identified, associated themselves with the Respondent through the dress and paraphernalia they wore. Such conduct also involved threats of bodily harm directed at employees, threats of blacklisting from further employment and indiscriminately threatening substantial fines, and creating the impression of 1 surveillance regarding those employees who continued working 2 during the strike.

4 As earlier noted, the only persons seen wearing Teamster 5 jackets and buttons were either business agents or those actively 6 supporting the strike. Not one instance of an outsider so dressed was 7 cited in the testimony. Nor can any doubt exist that the Respondent 8 was well aware of the kind of misconduct engaged in by those wearing 9 Teamster paraphernalia, yet the Respondent did virtually nothing to 10 prevent that misconduct. In fact, despite the temporary restraining 11 order, service of the unfair labor practice charge and complaint, 12 and despite the presence of numerous deputy sheriffs, the Respondent's 13 business agents and pickets continued to engage in serious misconduct 14 towards the non-strikers. Outside of its brief morning meetings, 15 the Respondent took no overt action reasonably calculated to end its 16 reign of violence and misconduct, and cannot be heard to complain 17 because it must now bear responsibility for misconduct engaged in by 18 those identified with it, who were merely following the examples 19 laid down by Respondent's very own business agents. Under NLRA 20 authority, the Respondent's responsibility for the Teamster-dressed 21 persons engaging in repeated, known misconduct is clear.27/

22 Despite what has been said in foregoing paragraphs, more 23 difficult questions exist concerning the Respondent's responsibility 24 in regard to the remaining misconduct described at the hearing. Thus, 25 as for the pump fire and vine cutting, two serious and purposeful acts, 26 virtually nothing in the record reflects the Respondent's 27 accountability. While we may conjecture and speculate as to who 28 perpetrated those misdeeds, and while we may even think we know, speculation by this agency should be avoided. As noted by the NLRB,
"Adequate proof of responsibility

27/Some suggestion was made by the Respondent at the hearing that striking workers (as opposed to Respondent's business agents) were angered at the Employer because they were evicted from the Employer's labor camp, and-thus such strikers may have been responsible for misconduct. But, no direct link exists between such alleged anger and any overt act described in the testimony. As noted in international Ass 'n of Machinists, supra, 183 NLRB 866, the doctrine of clean hands is not applicable to these proceedings involving the public interest, and "the fact that there was some provocative conduct directed against agents of Respondent does not confer a broad immunity upon Respondents, or license Respondents to engage either in a broad program of unfair labor practices unrelated to the particular provocations or to particular unfair labor practices unwarranted by the provocation presented."

1 Is necessary, and . . . such proof is lacking (here). " Teamsters Local 2 115 , supra , 157 NLRB at 1638 , n. l; see also , Dover Corp. , supra , 211 3 NLRB at 958. Similarly , It is unwarranted for me to conclude that 4 Respondent was responsible for the projectile that exploded through Mr.
Steele's truck window.

5 On the other hand , several incidents for which no perpetrator 6 is known involve closer links with the Respondent. The grape box fire 7 which Marty Zaninovich observed and extinguished began immediately 8 after an unnamed person was observed near the boxes. That person was 9 later seen by Zaninovich wearing a Teamster jacket and riding in a 10 caravan of Teamster cars. Nonetheless , the record does not reflect any 11 effort by Zaninovich to identify the person or have the ever-present 12 deputy sheriffs identify him. Such a falling on the part of Zaninovich 13 is hard to explain , and when viewed against the direct interest he had in 14 this proceeding due to his position with VBZ , his failure to attempt 15 identification of the " arsonist " makes it difficult to fully credit 16 his account of the fire and the association he drew between the alleged 17 perpetrator and Respondent.

18 More closely associated with the Respondent is the tire-19 slashing performed on Fred Lopez's state vehicle. While the perpetrator 20 may not be known , an unnamed person who was known to Lopez , and who 21 identified himself with the Respondent , acted in such a way as to almost 22 claim credit for the slashing. Even if that person did not exactly 23 claim credit for the slashing , his conduct (by fitting his own knife 24 into the slash marks) might well be sufficient to constitute an 25 implicit threat to an agent of the Board , warranting a finding against 26 the Respondent. The difficulty is that the only identifying feature 27 linking the unnamed person to the Respondent was his hearsay statement.
28 This Board has indicated that hearsay testimony is admissible in these proceedings , but " the use of such testimony is limited and cannot alone support a finding . " Patterson Farms , inc . , 2 ALRB No. 59 , p. 12 (slip opinion). See also , Taxi-Drivers Union . 174 NLRB 1 , 3 (1969) .
Thus , I feel constrained to avoid the conclusion that the person confronting Lopez the evening of August : 27 was -- in fact -- an agent for the Respondent , or that the Respondent must be held accountable for that person's implicit threat to Lopez.

29 Two other incidents bear closer scrutiny , however. First , 30 the fire which took place on the back of a truck , on September 1. Within 31 the immediate area of the fire stood some 40 to 60 persons supporting the 32 Respondent's strike and picketing. None of them assisted in 33 extinguishing the fire. On the contrary , they cheered the fire on , 34 yelling " huelga . " Although it may not be appropriate to conclude that 35 one of those among

1 the picketers started the fire, I do conclude that they essentially made 2 the fire their own by their vocal support for that very visible property 3 destruction. Such strongly voiced support for the fire could not be lost 4 on those employees who were in the area and who helped to end it.
5 Surely, the yelling conveyed to such non-striking employees the 6 Respondent's continued disregard for property and safety, as that 7 disregard had been repeatedly manifested in regard to the workers 8 themselves. The yelling must also have conveyed to workers and strikers 9 alike that Respondent would and could engage in such destruction if 10 called for by its strike. I conclude that Respondent, through its open, 11 vocal support for that fire, engaged in unlawful restraint and coercion 12 toward the employees present in the area.

Second, another fire took place on August 24, some 60 feet away from "three business agents of the Respondent. Circumstantial evidence persuades me that it is more likely than not that this fire was caused by one or more of those agents. Not only were they proximate to the fire and, thus, within the area from which they could have gone to set it, but when the fire was initially investigated by Deputy Sheriff Landers, Bernard Calantis first denied and then admitted to being within some 10 feet of the fire. In addition, Calantis's testimony at the hearing suggests to me his responsibility. On two occasions he was asked what he was wearing that day, to which he repeatedly responded tennis shoes. His testimonial response is curious and sounded overly prepared in view of the questions asked, and takes on significance in view of the fact that it was his tennis shoe print which linked him to the immediate area of the fire. Based on his testimonial demeanor, his testimonial answers, and his inconsistent responses to Deputy Sheriff Landers on the day of the fire, I conclude that Calantis, or one of his fellow business agents, was responsible for setting the grape boxes on fire.

In sum, the Respondent was responsible for extensive; pervasive, and numerous acts of misconduct during its strike against VBZ.
Its misconduct involved serious and repeated violations of Section 1154(a)(1) and I so find.

REMEDY

Having found that Respondent has engaged in certain unfair labor practices within the meaning of Section 1154(a)(1) of the Act, I shall recommend that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action designed to effectuate the policies of the Act.
Having found that Respondent engaged in serious, repeated, and pervasive misconduct under the Act, engaging in such misconduct despite an outstanding temporary

1 restraining order granted under the Act, I think it is appropriate to 2 order the Respondent to cease and desist from restraining and coercing 3 employees of VBZ in any manner as to their rights guaranteed under 4 Section 1152 of the Act. This broad prescription against the 5 Respondent is appropriate under the circumstances of this case. See 6 Teamsters Local 695, supra, 204 NLRB 866; Int'l Ass'n of 7 Machinists, supra, 183 NLRB at 1234.

8 In order to more fully remedy Respondent's unlawful conduct, 9 I also recommend that the Respondent publish and make known to the 10 employees of VBZ that it has been found in violation of the Act and has 11 been ordered not to engage in future violations of the Act. Attached 12 hereto is a Notice To Employees, setting forth the information Respondent 13 must transmit to VBZ employees and others.

14 The available means for publication of the Notice To 15 Employees are many. The ones I have selected as appropriate in view of 16 Respondent's serious misconduct are the following:

17 1. The Notice To Employees, translated into appropriate 18 languages (at least, English, Spanish, and Tagalla), with the approval 19 of the Fresno Regional Director, shall be mailed to all employees of 20 VBZ who were employed between August 1 and September 30, 1976. The 21 Notices are to be mailed to the employees' last known addresses, or 22 more current addresses if made known to Respondent. This publication 23 method finds support in the Board's Decision in Valley Farms and Rose J.
24 Farms, 2 ALRB No. 41 (1976).

25 2. The Respondent must also post the Notice To Employees for 26 a period of six months on its bulletin boards where other notices and 27 information are available for its members. The Respondent should post 28 the Notice on bulletin boards throughout its various offices in California. This state-wide posting is appropriate inasmuch as agents of the Respondent from several points in the state engaged in misconduct at VBZ and because employees engaged in agriculture move from place to place and may not see the Notice if posted only in the Respondent's Delano office.

3. Sufficient numbers of the Notice should be provided by Respondent to VBZ so that employees hired or employed by VBZ during the next peak season may be given copies of said Notice in their preferred language. VBZ may either distribute the Notice to employees, or provide suitable times for a representative of the Respondent to distribute the Notice, unless VBZ does not agree to such distribution on its property. Should VBZ approve of this distribution, employees are to be told that it

1 is important for them to know the contents of the Notice, and the 2 person so distributing the Notice shall offer to read the Notice to 3 employees in their preferred language.

5 Also, I believe that a public apology, to VBZ employees is 6 appropriate, to be made by a high-ranking representative of the 7 Respondent. VBZ is to afford the Respondent a suitable time during the 8 next peak season so that one or more representatives' of Respondent may 9 read aloud to them a copy of the Notice in all three languages cited 10 above. This public apology may be given in conjunction with the 11 individual distribution of the Notice discussed above. The foregoing 12 remedies for Respondent's violations of the Act are consistent with 13 the more traditional remedies applied by the NLRB in similar cases, 14 albeit some of the posting requirements and the public apology 15 requirement are somewhat exceptional due to the severity and 16 pervasiveness of Respondent's misconduct.

17 In addition, the General Counsel strongly urges that two 18 other remedies should be granted; (1) that Respondent's certificate 19 to represent VBZ employees, as recently granted by the Board, be revoked, 20 and (2) that Respondent be ordered to reimburse the Board and VBZ for 21 expenses incurred in the investigation, preparation, presentation, 22 and conduct of this case.^{28/} I now turn to the General Counsel's 23 specially requested remedies.

24
25 Relying heavily on Union Nationale De Trabajadores, 219 NLRB
26 No. 157, 90 LRRM 1023 (1975), affirmed, _____ F.2d 92 LRRM 3425 27 (C.A. 1, 1976), the General Counsel urges that Respondent be 28 decertified as the bargaining representative of VBZ employees due to its severe, repeated misconduct. The NLRB in Union Nationale revoked the union's representation certificate due to the union's repeated demonstration in past NLRB cases of its violence and its rejection of the NLRB and NLRA; the NLRB concluded, in view of the rather extensive history of litigation involving the union, that in the case then before it the union could not engage in constructive bargaining in behalf of represented employees. The NLRB's decertification action was apparently the first of its kind.

30 _____
31 ^{28/}The General Counsel originally requested that Respondent 32 reimburse or compensate employees for damage done to their property and 33 for emotional distress suffered by them as a result of Respondent's 34 misconduct, as well as compensation to VBZ for property damage. At the 35 hearing, however, the General Counsel deleted these monetary requests, 36 and they will not be considered herein.

1 When the First Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the NLRB's 2 decision in Union Nationale, it stated by way of dicta, "¹. . . we think 3 that a decertification order is an extreme measure and should be entered only 4 when the Board has first demonstrated that there are no equally 5 effective alternative means of promoting the objectives of the Act." 6 92 LRRM at 3434. The Court went on by dicta to enunciate what it viewed 7 as the considerations surrounding decertification as an available 8 remedy; the Court noted that the NLRB should determine whether decerti-9 fication is necessary to protect the collective bargaining and 10 representational processes, whether an alternative remedy exists, and 11 whether decertification promotes employee interests rather than to serve 12 primarily as a penalty or deterrent for misconduct.

13 The concerns raised by the First Circuit, I believe, are 14 important. Although decertification of the Respondent here might well 15 deter it from future acts of violence, such decertification does not 16 seem to be in the interests of the VBZ employees. The employees are 17 currently represented by the Respondent, and--at least for a time-- 18 bargaining went on in their behalf. Were we to now decertify the 19 Respondent another representation election could be held, thus delaying 20 further bargaining and representation in behalf of the employees, or the 21 employees would go unrepresented. Furthermore, the Respondent has 22 represented VBZ employees since 1973, was duly elected as their re-23 presentative in late 1975, and nothing in the record reflects that it 24 has previously abused its representation role vis-a-vis VBZ employees.
25 Also, despite the seriousness of Respondent's misconduct, it has not 26 shown the utter, repeated and longstanding disregard of the Act as 27 demonstrated by the union in Union Nationale.

28 On the other hand, I do not doubt that in an appropriate case that the Board has authority to revoke a labor organization's certificate. As repeatedly noted under the NLRA, ". . . the remedial power of the Board is a 'broad discretionary one subject to limited judicial review.'" N.L.R.B. v. J. H. Rutter-Rex Mfg. Co., ___ U.S.
_____, 72 LRRM 2881 (1969), quoting with approval from Fibreboard Corp.
v. N.L.R.B., 379 U.S. 203, 216 (1964). Or, as was stated in Golden State Bottling Co. v. N.L.R.B., 414 U.S. 168, 176 (1973), "...the Board's remedial powers under Section 10(c) include broad discretion to fashion and issue the order . . . to achieve the ends, and effectuate the policies of the Act." Accord: N.L.R.B. v. Food Store Employees Union, 417 U.S. 1, 8 (1974).

 Although the NLRB has not established a remedial practice of decertifying unions that engage in serious misconduct, I believe that the authority to do so under its statute as well as

1 under our Act exists.^{29/} Moreover, I do not believe that this Board 2 should give undue respect to the NLRB's remedial practices, since the 3 nature of agricultural employment, the type of employees involved, and 4 the nature of union representation necessarily make our remedial needs 5 different from the general industrial practices overseen by the NLRB.
6 And, as under the NLRA, our Act gives the Board wide discretion "to 7 provide such . . . relief as will effectuate the policies" of the Act, a 8 grant of authority that should be applied within the context of our unique 9 agricultural setting.

10 Nevertheless, for the reasons earlier expressed, I do not 11 believe that decertification is warranted in this case. In addition, our 12 Act is relatively new, and practice under it is yet slight. The potential 13 ramifications of a decertification order are still unclear, particularly in 14 regard to the impact such decertification may have on employee 15 representational rights. We know that strikes, "similar to the one 16 initiated by the Respondent, are probably most effective when Initiated 17 during an employer's peak season, at the very same time when there is the 18 greatest desire by agricultural employees to continue working, and earn 19 their income. The interplay between a union's right and need to strike 20 over bargaining demands and the right and need of its represented members 21 and employees to renounce the strike and continue working may well produce 22 substantial conflicts. Were the Board to now order decertification of the 23 Respondent, it might too prematurely dilute the right to strike and its 24 viability as a weapon_in collective bargaining.

25 Of course, strikes are supposed to be nonviolent. No one wants 26 to encourage the kind of conduct engaged in by the Respondent in this case.
27 The Respondent and its top business agents acted reprehensibly. Repeated 28 acts of violence and misconduct by the Respondent, as demonstrated in this 29 case, may well be a future cause for decertification. Violence in the 30 agricultural fields cannot be tolerated. But, at this juncture under the 31 Act more than just the policy of deterrence is involved, for 32 ^{29/lt} might be noted that when the NLRB has found that a union 33 engages in invidious racial discrimination, the NLRB has voiced its 34 willingness to decertify or refuse to certify such a union. See Bekins 35 Moving & Storage Co., 211 NLRB No. 7, 86 LRRM 1323 (1974); Local 1, 36 Independent Metal Workers Union, 147 NLRB 1573 (1964). Those cases, like 37 the principle enunciated in Catalytic Industrial Maintenance Co., 209 NLRB 38 641 (1974), indicate that decertification is appropriate when a labor 39 organization acts in a manner contrary to the representation rights of 40 those employees it so represents.

1 we should hesitate before moving too quickly down a path that may dampen 2 the right to strike under our statute, particularly at a time when the 3 means that a labor organization has to effectively communicate with and 4 rally support from its members, members who in many cases are transient 5 to the area in which the strike occurs and foreign to their labor 6 organization's policies and leadership, are not yet sufficiently 7 sophisticated to eliminate the ugly footprints of coercion and muscle 8 in presenting a united front.

10 While three strikes at the plate for the Respondent may 11 be far too many, one is not. I do not recommend at this juncture 12 that revocation of the Respondent's certificate be a remedy imposed 13 in this case.

14 The second unusual remedial request made by the General 15 Counsel involves reimbursement by the Respondent of the costs of this 16 litigation.^{30/} Here too, we can look to guidance under the NLRA.
17 Typically, the NLRB has not imposed costs in an unfair labor practice 18 proceeding unless a respondent engages in frivolous litigation by 19 raising frivolous defenses, thus frustrating effective litigation 20 calendars. See Heck's, inc., 215 NLRB No. 142, 88 LRRM 1049 (1974), on 21 remand from 417 U.S. 1. The NLRB, however, noted its lack of intention 22 "to lock in concrete any past precedent" and that it is "a continuing 23 function of this administrative agency to consider on a case-by-case 24 basis, in light of both our experience and the facts of each case, what 25 remedy will best remedy the misconduct found." Heck's, 88 LRRM 1052-3.
26 The Board has indicated that it "has discretion to grant attorneys' 27 fees and costs in appropriate cases" Valley Farms, supra, 2 ALRB 28 No. 41, p. 6 (slip opinion).

For several reasons I conclude that it would be appropriate to award both the General Counsel and the Charging Party costs and fees in this proceeding. First, I believe that the Respondent has engaged to a substantial degree in frivolous litigation. Although Respondent's witnesses denied engaging in any wrongdoing, a number of its business agents did not testify and no such denials exist in regard to their misconduct. Furthermore, while credibility issues in the abstract are raised by the conflict in testimony, such credibility conflicts are far more imagined than real. The evidence was overwhelming that Respondent engaged in many and pervasive violations of the Act, misconduct necessitating some 1,500 manhours of work from Tulare

—————^{30/}The parties agreed at the hearing should I grant the General Counsel's requested costs, that I retain jurisdiction to determine the extent of those costs should the parties be unable to agree on them.

1 County Deputy Sheriffs. To deny any wrongdoing whatsoever, as the 2 Respondent did, in the face of the violence and destruction taking 3 place between August 24 and September 3 borders on the frivolous, 4 especially in light of the two prior proceedings which took place in the 5 county court. Indeed, when the General Counsel moved to hold the 6 Respondent in contempt of the outstanding restraining order, on 7 September 3, the violence and other misconduct came to a screeching halt.
8 It is simply incredible to deny the Respondent's control over and 9 ability to end the flagrant misconduct at VBZ.

10 Second, although remedial authority under the Act is not 11 designed to penalize a respondent, surely the Board has an obligation to 12 try_as_best it can to deter future misconduct and restore the pre-existing 13 order. This administrative agency should not sit back, merely 14 slapping a serious offender "on the wrist," as described by the 15 General Counsel, for misconduct which should be clearly disapproved and 16 discouraged. One way to discourage flagrant and serious misconduct 17 under the Act is to make it more costly for parties to engage in such 18 wanton disregard of our statute.

19 In this case, the Respondent has compelled both the General 20 Counsel and the Charging Party to engage its resources repeatedly in an 21 effort to end conduct unquestionably violative of the Act. Not once, 22 not twice, but three times the General Counsel has been forced into 23 litigation over the Respondent's misconduct. Furthermore, the 24 investigation and presentation of the charges against the Respondent 25 undoubtedly was made more difficult and costly by the nature of the 26 industry with which we deal. Agricultural employees often move about 27 from place to place, making it difficult to locate them for purposes of 28 investigation and testimony; likewise, many have seemed reluctant participants in these proceedings. Additionally, it is fair to say based on my existing experience that the level of education and understanding of the law on the part of many farm workers is modest, thus not only making it more difficult to effectively mount a case but perhaps encouraging parties to violate the law more than they might otherwise.

23 Third, and in connection with what has been already said, 24 to respond to Respondent's serious misconduct by issuing a mere cease 25 and desist order does not seem warranted. It might well encourage, 26 rather than discourage, further misconduct, all at the expense of 27 precious state financial resources. A firm response to serious acts of 28 misconduct appears appropriate, and one available--though unusual-- means of expressing that response is to make it more costly for a party to callously disregard the Act's provisions by contravening policies this State enacted

1 after many years of difficulty in the farm fields, a set of policies
2 which the Legislature hoped would "bring certainty and a sense of fair 3 play" in the farm fields of this State.

4 Finally, the remedy by way of costs and counsel fees would 5 not, unlike decertification, potentially dampen the statutory right to 6 strike. Nor would it disregard the relatively recent expression by the 7 employees involved that the Respondent should represent them in 8 collective bargaining. But, the Respondent and other potential 9 violators of the law would know they cannot act with impunity. And 10 significantly, ordering costs against the Respondent would restore some 11 semblance to the preexisting positions of the General Counsel and 12 Charging Party, who have no other forum to turn to for recovery of 13 their costs as a result of Respondent's misconduct.

14 For all the foregoing reasons, I recommend to the Board that 15 Respondent be ordered to reimburse the General Counsel and the Charging 16 Party for reasonable costs and attorneys¹ fees associated with this 17 proceeding. Such costs are to include expenses incurred in the 18 investigation, preparation, presentation, and conduct of this 19 proceeding, including reasonable counsel fees, witness fees, transcript 20 and record costs, travel expenses and other reasonable costs associated 21 with this proceeding. 31/

22 ORDER

23 Respondent, its officers, agents and representatives 24 shall:

25 1. Cease and desist from:

26 (a) In any manner restraining or coercing employees of 27 Vincent B. Zaninovich, Inc., in their exercise of their right to self-28 organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, or to refrain from any and all such activities, except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement of the type authorized by Section 1153(c) of the Act.

31/As earlier noted, I have agreed to retain jurisdiction to resolve any disputes concerning the appropriate costs. Should the Board accept my recommended remedy as to costs, it may wish to devise an alternative means for resolving disputes over that portion of the remedy.

1 (b) Engaging In conduct In regard to VBZ employees of the 2 following type: threatening violence or committing such violence, 3 threatening property damage or committing such damage, giving employees 4 the Impression they are under surveillance, threatening employees with 5 blacklisting or actually black-listing such employees, threatening non-6 members with fines for engaging in protected activity or fining such 7 non-members, or committing any of the foregoing-acts in regard to other 8 persons either in the presence of VBZ employees or where it is reasonably 9 certain that such employees will learn of such conduct.

10 2. Take the following affirmative action:

11 (a) Post the attached Notice To Employees in the manner 12 described in the preceding section entitled "The Remedy."

13 (b) Distribute the attached Notice To Employees, and 14 provide copies of said Notice to VBZ, all in the manner described in the 15 section entitled "The Remedy."

16 (c) Provide representatives, if VBZ agrees, to 17 distribute the Notice To Employees to employees and read to them the 18 Notice, all in the manner described in the section entitled "The 19 Remedy."

20 (d) Designate a high-ranking representative or 21 representatives to read to employees the Notice To Employees at a time 22 and place acceptable to VBZ, during the next appropriate peak season, 23 in the manner described in the section entitled "The Remedy."

24 (e) Preserve and make available to the Board or its 25 agent, upon request, for examination and copying all membership records 26 or other records necessary to determine whether the Respondent has 27 complied with this Decision and Order to the fullest extent possible.

28 (f) Reimburse the General Counsel and the Charging Party for the expenses incurred In the Investigation, preparation, presentation, and conduct of this proceeding, including such things as reasonable counsel fees, witness fees, transcript and record costs, travel expenses, and other reasonable costs and expenses.

(g) Notify the Regional Director of the Fresno Regional Office within 20 days from receipt of a copy of this Decision and Order of steps the Respondent has taken to comply

1 therewith, and to continue reporting periodically thereafter until 2 full compliance is achieved.

NOTICE TO EMPLOYEES

After a hearing in which all parties presented evidence, the Agricultural Labor Relations Board has found that the Western Conference of Teamsters, Agricultural Division, and its Local 946, violated the Agricultural Labor Relations Act. The Teamsters have been ordered to notify you and others that we violated the Act and that we will respect the rights of employees of V. B. Zaninovich & Sons, Inc., in the future. Therefore, in behalf of the Teamsters, I am now telling each of you:

1. We unlawfully threatened employees with property damage and violence, we unlawfully damaged property and engaged in violence, we unlawfully threatened employees with the loss of future work and with substantial fines, we unlawfully gave employees the impression they were being watched and that we would take reprisals against them and we committed similar unlawful acts towards others who were not employees. We committed such unlawful acts because employees would not join our strike against VBZ.

2. We hereby inform you that we will not engage in future unlawful restraint and coercion towards the employees of VBZ, or commit acts similar to those described in the preceding paragraph.

3. We inform you that you are free to exercise your right to self-organization, to form, join or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of your own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection. We want to also inform you that you are free to refrain from any and all such activities. In particular you are free to refuse to join one of our strikes, except that we may discipline our members who refuse to follow lawful Teamster strike action, as long as our discipline conforms to the law.

4. We apologize for the misconduct we engaged in during our strike at V. B. Zaninovich & Sons, Inc., during August and September of 1976. We are sorry for any damage or injury done to any of you and for any damage and injury done to representatives of the company.
